ROUT OF LOTTERY SEEMS COMPLETE

Uncle Sam's Campaign Against Honduras Concern Leads to Some Surprising Revelations.

BIG PLANT IN MOBILE.

Prosecutions of Managers and Agents of Company Will Be Pushed with Utmost Vigor.

BY RAYMOND.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Apparently the government has won an extraordinary victory as a result of the prosecutions it has instituted against the managers and agents of the Honduras lottery.

Suits have been brought in various places throughout the country, one indictment has been piled upon another, and things have been made so hot for the lottery people that they have thrown up the sponge and have gone out of business. At least they assert that this is so, but to make assurance doubly sure the government proposes to press some of the indictments to a speedy trial in the hope of breaking up the entire machinery of one of the most dangerous concerns ever known in this country.

For many years the general public has understood that the selling of lottery tickets in this country was stamped out by the decision of the United States Supreme court, which prevented the New Orleans lottery making use of the mails to send tickets or prizes. Recently, however, an offshoot of the old New Orleans lottery, generally known as the Honduras Lottery company, has established itself in this country, and has succeeded in doing an enormous business, the extent of which was suspected by no outsider until government investigators began their inquiry.

Lottery Men Would Compromise.

When the department of justice began to move rapidly and within the last week or two agents of the lottery company have been negotiating for a compromise, promising they will get out of business at once and completely if prosecutions are dropped. The government officers thus far have not been disposed to make much of a compromise, but have been insisting upon fines in various cases which would aggregate not less than $250,000. This severe penalty staggered even the plutocratic lottery company, but it is understood agents all over have received notices that there will be no more drawings for the present at least.

Mobile is the center of the prosecution of the lottery. It took a good deal of investigation to find out the system used, but it finally was discovered that in Mobile drawings were printed in such enormous numbers for distribution to various agents that fast power presses had to be employed and machinery was kept working at times night and day.

At first the drawings were printed at Wilmington, Del., but later on the plant was moved to Mobile, from which town the printed slips were shipped to New Orleans by water. There have been about twenty arrests made at Mobile and agents have been indicted and arrested all over the country. The statement is made by representatives of the department of justice that there are on file now 6,000 indictments or counts in indictments, representing prosecutions of hundreds of agents, including almost every large city of the United States.

Will Show No Quarter.

District Attorneys W. H. Ambrecht of Mobile, John P. Nellds of Delaware, and Edwin W. Sims of Chicago among others have participated in conferences here, the result of which has been a decision on the part of the department not to accept professions of repentance on the part of lottery people, but to prosecute enough of them to insure the breaking up of the whole combination.

According to statements made at some of the conferences it was said that an agent at Boston was making out of his end of the business a net profit of over $1,000 a month, and agencies in Chicago and New York were much more prosperous. So much money was made by this Honduras lottery combination that ordinary fines would have been no terror to the promoters, and it became necessary to adopt the system of cumulative counts, resulting in enormous fines, which has been employed to bring the Standard Oil corporation to terms.

Operate on Big Scale.

The investigation made at Mobile startled the government agents when they first set about the work, because they were entirely unprepared to find that the lottery had been operating in such an extensive manner. The plant in the gulf city was composed of a number of fast power presses, and they ran almost continuously. As fast as printed slips were turned out they were put into boxes, shipped to New Orleans by water, or sent throughout the country by express. One box in particular was traced direct to New Orleans and then into the hands of the express company, by which it was delivered at Atlanta, where there is a large and flourishing agency.

Similar shipments were traced in other directions, and before long government agents had unearthed a vast network of fraudulent operations. The express companies were used to deliver wholesale supplies to agents in large cities. To them the delivery of drawings was made largely by person, but there was also resort to the mails, which is particularly prohibited by federal statutes.

Liable Under Law.

The old lottery law, as amended in 1890, covers the ground so thoroughly that it is next to impossible for local agents to distribute drawings by mail without coming within the range of severe punishment. Under the lottery section it is provided that:

"No letter, postal card, or circular concerning any lottery, so-called gift concern, or other similar enterprise offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance, or concerning schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses, and no list of drawings at any lottery or similar scheme, and no lottery ticket or part thereof, and no check, draft, bill, money, postal note, or money order for purchase of any ticket, tickets, or part thereof, or of any share of chance in any such lottery or gift enterprise, shall be carried in the mail or delivered at or through any postoffice or branch thereof, or by any letter carrier."

The law provides for severe punishment, and it is only a question of proof, because every time a lottery slip containing a list of drawings, or ticket, or money is delivered, it is a separate offense, the punishment clause providing both fine and imprisonment.

OIL KING MAKES $32,000,000 GIFT.

John D. Rockefeller Adds an Amazing Donation to Fund Used for Aid of the Smaller Colleges.

LARGEST EVER KNOWN.

Brings His Aggregate Benefactions Up to $85,056,988; Andrew Carnegie's Total Is $134,955,365.

New York, Feb. 7.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller today gave $32,000,000 to the general education board.

Never in the history of the race has any man given so great a sum in a single gift for educational, social, or philanthropic purposes.

This benefaction brings Mr. Rockefeller's total gifts to the public for education, religion, or philanthropy up to the immense total of $85,056,988. These figures represent the sum of his known gifts. Probably several millions might be added to the amount if all of his contributions were known.

Of this immense sum $21,324,322 has been given to the University of Chicago. He had previously given $11,000,000 to the general education board, and today's gift brings his total contribution to that organization up to $43,000,000.

Second to Carnegie.

Mr. Rockefeller ranks second only to Andrew Carnegie as the world's greatest contributor to the cause of human progress. The Pittsburg ironmaster's gifts, as far as known, foot up to the amazing total of $134,955,366.

All previous records for beneficence shrink in comparison with this single gift of $32,000,000. Andrew Carnegie has given altogether $30,000,000 to the famous Pittsburg Polytechnic school, but the amount has been extended over a number of years. Cecil Rhodes gave $10,000,000 for the foundation of the Rhodes scholarships. Leland Stanford and his wife gave $10,000,000 for the foundation of Stanford university. Marshall Field's gift of $8,000,000 for the Field museum in Chicago is of recent date.

Gift Is Complete Surprise.

The immensity of today's gift of $32,000,000 came as a complete surprise to the general education board. The board had an intimation that Mr. Rockefeller intended to make a further contribution, and a special meeting had been called to consider a communication from him. But no one dreamed that the gift would be the greatest ever given in the history of mankind.

When the board met there were present Frederick T. Gates, George Foster Peabody, Dr. Wallace Buttrick, Robert C. Ogden, J. D. Rockefeller Jr., Albert Shaw, Starr J. Murphy, Edward A. Alderman, and Harry Pratt Judson.

As soon as the board had been called to order John D. Rockefeller Jr. handed an envelop to Secretary Buttrick, asking that the inclosure be read.

Terms of the Gift.

The letter proved to be as follows:

"New York, Feb. 6.—General Education Board, 54 William Street, New York City—Gentlemen: My father authorizes me to say that on or before April 1, 1907, he will give to the general board income bearing securities the present market value of which is about thirty-two million dollars ($32,000,000), one-third to be added to the permanent endowment of the board, two-thirds to be applied to such specific objects within the corporate purposes of the board as either he or I may from time to time direct, any remainder not so designated at the death of the survivor to be added also to the permanent endowment of the board. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER JR."

Board Expresses Amazement.

When the general expression of amazement had exhausted itself, young Mr. Rockefeller was asked what the "specific purposes" referred to in his father's letter meant. He said that it was in the line of educational work, and was intended, in their opinion, to give Mr. Rockefeller the right to direct the disposition of the fund to such institutions, within the province of the board, as he may deem proper. The elder Mr. Rockefeller is not a member of the board, but his son is a member, and the active direction doubtless will come from him.

The board voted to accept the gift, and, in appreciation, drafted a letter to the elder Mr. Rockefeller as follows:

"The general education board acknowledges the receipt of the communication of Feb. 6, 1907, from Mr. John D. Rockefeller Jr., a member of this body, announcing your decision to give the board for the purpose of its organization securities of the current value of thirty-two million dollars ($32,000,000). The general education board accepts this gift with a deep sense of gratitude to you, and of responsibility to society. The sum added to the eleven millions ($11,000,000) which you have formerly given to this board, makes the general education board the guardian and administrator of a total trust fund of forty-three million dollars ($43,000,000).

Largest Sum Ever Given.

"This is the largest sum ever given by a man in the history of the race for any social or philanthropic purpose. The board congratulates you upon the high and wise impulse which has moved you to this deed, and desires to thank you, in behalf of all educational interests whose developments it will advance, in behalf of our country, whose civilization for all time it should be made to strengthen and elevate, and in behalf of mankind everywhere, in whose interests it has been given, and for whose use it is dedicated.

"The administration of this fund entails upon the general education board the most far reaching responsibilities ever placed upon any educational organization in the world. As members of the board, we accept this responsibility, conscious alike of its difficulties and its opportunities. We will use our best wisdom to transmute your gift into intellectual and moral power, counting it a supreme privilege to dedicate whatever strength we have to its just use in the service of men.

"FREDERICK T. GATES, chairman.
"GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY, treasurer.
"DR. WALLACE BUTTRICK, secretary.
"ROBERT C. OGDEN.
"J. D. ROCKEFELLER JR.
"ALBERT SHAW.
"STARR J. MURPHY.
"EDWARD A. ALDERMAN.
"HARRY PRATT JUDSON."

The absent members of the board, whose names were affixed to the letter to Mr. Rockefeller by their associates, were: E. Benjamin Andrews, Hollis B. Frissell, Daniel C.

THE HUMAN SACRIFICE.

TOMB OF QUEEN TEIE FOUND

Ancient Egypt Gives Up Secrets Hidden for 35 Centuries.

ALMOST FILLED WITH GOLD.

Coffin and Body Itself Incased in Sheets of Precious Metal.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Feb. 8, 3 a. m.—Theodore M. Davis, who discovered the tomb of the parents of the Egyptian queen Teie, has made another sensational discovery, that of the tomb and the mummy of Queen Teie herself.

Next to Cleopatra Queen Teie was the most famous woman of Egypt. She was the mother of King Amenhotef IV., the ruler who 1500 years B. C. plunged Egypt into a fanatical civil war by introducing a new form of religion of pantheistic monothetan form. This revolution spent its force before Moses was born.

Literally Filled with Gold.

The tomb of Queen Teie is in Thebes, and adjoins that of Rameses IX. It is literally filled with jewelry and sheets of solid gold, which the priestly desecraters, who, when the heretical religion had been stamped out, vented their rage on the tombs of Amenhotef and Teie, had left untouched.

Wherever the excavators walked they trod upon fragments of gold plate and gold leaf. There was no sarcophagus, but a huge catafalque, which had been torn to pieces by the priests, had been erected over the mummy of the queen. It was thickly plated with gold inside and outside, and engraved with the names and titles of Teie and her son, as well as with representations of their adoration of the solar disc, the symbol of the religion Amenhotef had tried to force upon his people.

Coffin Incrusted in Gold.

The whole figure of the king has been destroyed, but that of his mother was allowed to remain unharmed. The coffin, with the mummy of the queen in it, had been carried to the south side of the tomb, where it lay upon a bier incrusted with gold, supported by four lions, with claws, also of gold.

The woodwork of the bier, unhappily, has been converted into touchwood by the action of water. The coffin, however, is intact. It is a superb example of the jeweler's work. The wood of which it is composed is entirely covered with a frame of gold, inlaid with lapis lazuli, and cornelian green glass. The inlay work represents for the most part a pattern of scales, but down the middle runs an inscription from which it is learned that the coffin was made for Teie by her son.

The mummy itself is wrapped from head to foot in sheets of gold. The water, which for many years has been draining through it, has reduced it to little more than pulp, and it fell to pieces when it was examined in the presence of several Egyptologists on Jan. 2d. There were bracelets on the arms, a necklace of gold bands, and ornaments of gold inlaid with precious stones round the neck.

Royal Crown Is Formed.

The head was still encircled by an object priceless and unique, the imperial crown of the queens of ancient Egypt. It is at once simply and exquisitely fashioned, and represents the royal vulture holding the signet ring in its talons, while its wings surround the head, fastened tightly behind by a pin. The whole is of solid gold, without inlay or other adventitious ornament.

It was difficult to avoid a feeling of awe when handling this model of ancient sovereignty which had thus risen up from the depths of a vanished world.

From an artistic point of view, however, perhaps the finest object yet discovered in the tomb is a portrait head of the queen, which forms the cover of her four canopic jars in the place of the heads of the four genii of the dead required by Egyptian orthodoxy. The head of the heretic queen herself is in Egyptian alabaster, with the eyeballs and eyebrows represented by inlays of lapis lazuli and obsidian. The face evidently is a portrait, and a beautiful portrait it is. It is that of a woman at once masterful and engaging, but apart from the lips there is little of the Egyptian about it. The delicate subaqueline curve of the nose is European rather than Egyptian.

It is remarkable how little funeral furniture was found in the tomb. The queen's burial, however, was not of the orthodox pattern. She was a heretic and maybe also a foreigner.

REVOLUTIONISTS USE BOMBS; MANY KILLED OR WOUNDED.

Outbreak in San Juan, Argentine, Followed by Sacking and Burning of Houses—Governor Taken Prisoner.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 7.—A revolutionary outbreak occurred in San Juan this morning, headed by Col. Sarzento. After five hours' fighting, in which explosive bombs were used, the revolutionists were victorious. It is reported that twenty men were killed and many wounded. Numerous houses were burned and others sacked.

The governor and other provincial officials are reported to be prisoners. Gen. Sarmiento has assumed the rank of governor of the province ad interim, with headquarters at San Juan City. It is rumored that the victorious rebels propose to march on Mendoza.

When the news reached here Acting Gov. Villanauva called a meeting of the ministers and intervention was decided upon. Federal troops will be sent to San Juan forthwith. The outbreak is attributed to purely local causes.

KILLED IN SPRINGER BUILDING.

Body of Elevator Operator Found at Bottom of Shaft—Machinery of Car Said to Be Defective.

The mangled body of F. T. Ambers, 28 years old, 114 North California avenue, was found at the bottom of an elevator shaft in the Warren Springer building, 197 Canal street, last night by two workmen. He is believed by the police of the Desplaines street station to have fallen through an open door from one of the upper floors.

Ambers was an elevator operator, and the elevator, which was found by the police to be defective, was at the top of the building. It is believed that he left the cage and when he returned stepped through the opening after the elevator had gone up to the roof of the structure.

GIRL SOLD TO RICH AMERICAN?

Vienna Police Looking for Millionaire Named Heastest or Hobstel on Serious Charge.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

VIENNA, Feb. 7.—A girl who is a native of Budapest went to America a few years ago with her widowed mother. Her mother died, and the girl was sent home by the Austrian embassy at Washington. A friend of the mother, Dr. Salgo, who followed the girl, sold her here a few days ago to an American millionaire named William Heastest, or Hobstel. A servant divulged the secret to the police. Neither Salgo nor the girl, who is less than 14 years, has been found.

ALIENS DRIVEN FROM GERMANY

Government Orders Expulsion of Foreigners Who Aided Socialists in Recent Elections for Reichstag.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—The government is expelling aliens who aided the socialist candidates in the elections for members of the reichstag, holding that foreigners settling in Germany violate elementary decency towards their hosts if they support publicly that which aims avowedly at the overthrow of the monarchy and the destruction of the existing order of society. The chief offenders are revolutionary Russian students.

YOUNG HEIRESS IS MISSING.

Mystery in Disappearance of Miss Anthony of Philadelphia.

LAST SEEN WHILE SHOPPING.

Returned Recently to Resume Studies at Drexel Institute.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Miss Helen E. Anthony, a wealthy young woman residing at the Blenheim apartment house, Seventeenth and Chestnut streets, vanished from the side of a companion in a crowded Chestnut street department store at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning last, and all efforts to find trace of her have been futile.

In a small yellow handbag she carried were a bankbook of the Real Estate Trust company, where she kept her account, a check drawn to her order, and $20 in money. It was her intention to deposit the check Tuesday morning, but she did not do so.

Just Returned to Studies.

Miss Anthony is 27 years old. She came from Gouveneur, N. Y., where her brother, Charles H. Anthony, resides. Her parents, from whom she inherited a fortune, are dead. For the last two years she had been living in this city. She spent the summer near Westchester, and only a week ago returned to town to take up special courses at the Drexel institute.

Miss Anthony on Tuesday started out from the Blenheim with Miss Bibber, her companion, who lived with her, to purchase tickets for the opera. She called at the office of her physician, Dr. J. A. Bayard Kane, 211 South Seventeenth street, who today reported her disappearance to the police. Leaving the physician's office the two women visited the opera ticket office in Chestnut street. On their way up Chestnut street they stopped at a department store and there Miss Anthony vanished.

Fair and Slight in Build.

Miss Anthony is of slight build, with light brown hair, blue eyes, and a fair complexion. She weighs about 115 pounds. She wore rimless glasses, a black hat, trimmed with black feathers and velvet, and a dress of brown material with a white line through it, so small that the general effect of the goods was that of solid brown. Over this she wore a tan colored coat, three-quarters length, and a small fur collar.

CHINAMAN SCARES KINGSTON.

Perils Life to Ring Bell in Tower Tilted by Quake—Looked for Reward, Is Arrested.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Feb. 7.—A dispatch to the Times from Kingston says the town was startled last night by the ringing of the town bell. Knowing the bell tower was leaning at an angle of 45°, people gathered in hundreds to ascertain the cause of the ringing. It then was discovered that a Chinaman, believing the government had offered a reward of $250 to anybody who could ring the bell without bringing down the tower, had at great peril ascended the twisted steps of the leaning tower and rang the bell seven times. Then the Chinaman descended only to be immediately arrested.

WIFE IS MARTYR FOR THAW'S SAKE

She Tells Terrible Story of Wrecked Girlhood to Justify Her Husband's Deed.

PITY WRUNG FROM JURY.

Heartrending Avowal of Former Chorus Girl Moves All Who Hear to Horror and Pity.

New York, Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw took the witness stand when court opened this morning in the trial of her husband for the murder of Stanford White, and entered upon the recital of her extraordinary story. That it would be extraordinary had been anticipated. It turned out to be more sensational that could well have been expected.

Young Mrs. Thaw was on the stand for four hours. In the course of that time she described in detail her acquaintance and relations with Harry K. Thaw and Stanford White. The culminating part of her recital was reached at the morning session when she described a night passed in a certain apartment in West Twenty-fourth street, when she said the architect wrecked her girlhood.

Mr. White's purpose, she stated, was accomplished without her knowledge and while she was under the influence of a single glass of champagne, which had rendered her unconscious.

Story Leaves Nothing Untold.

Under examination by Mr. Delmas the witness told how she met Stanford White, how he got her mother to go to Pittsburg, leaving her in his care, and how he arranged various luncheons, suppers, and dinners at his apartments in the tower of Madison Square garden and in the West Twenty-fourth street apartment. She also told how she posed at a photographic studio in East Twenty-second street when Mr. White was present. All these occurrences took place, she testified, in August and September, 1901, when she was a few months less than 17 years old and still wore her dresses only to her shoe tops and her hair down her back.

Young Mrs. Thaw further told the jury how she met Harry Thaw, how his interest in her grew, how he followed her to Paris in 1903, and there asked her to marry him. This she declined to do, giving as her reason her ruin by Stanford White.

All the things she told the jury she swore she told to Harry Thaw. She and Thaw, she said, sat up all night talking the matter over. She described in detail the effect of her story on the man who afterward married her. This effect she described as terrible.

All Admitted in Evidence.

All the details of this recital were admitted in evidence only after a prolonged controversy between Mr. Jerome and Mr. Delmas, in which the district attorney made it clear that evidence of this character was admissible only because of the plea of insanity, and as being intended to account for the unsound state which it was contended Thaw's mind had reached on the night when he killed Stanford White.

The truth of the statements made by Mrs. Thaw to her husband cannot under the rules of evidence be controverted by the district attorney, it being held that the only material points are whether she actually told it to Thaw and whether he actually believed it. There is, however, nothing to prevent the prosecution from attacking her credibility, and doubtless vigorous attempts will be made to do so, both on her cross examination and by the introduction of evidence in rebuttal.

May Save Husband's Life.

Should these attempts fail of their purpose it was generally admitted today that the story told by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw in court is certain to be a most potent factor in the effort her husband's counsel are making to save his life.

Extraordinary pains were taken all through Mrs. Harry Thaw's testimony to prevent any names not vitally involved in the Thaw case itself from reaching the public. The witness was cautioned repeatedly not to mention any of these names aloud, and with one or two exceptions she obeyed, though she confided them to the district attorney's private ear.

Thaw Maligned in Stories.

At the afternoon session young Mrs. Thaw testified that she had been told of various escapades in which Thaw had participated before she had married him. Mr. White, she said, had told her that Thaw was a morphine fiend, another man told her that Thaw had put a girl in a bath tub and poured scalding water on her, while still another had told her of an occurrence in which a woman had been found in a hotel tied to a bed post, while Thaw beat her with a whip.

She told Thaw all about these things, she said, and Thaw denied them. She investigated these stories, she added, and found that they could not be verified.

Ante-Marriage Letters Read.

Mr. Delmas succeeded in having several letters accepted in evidence. They were all written by Thaw. One of them was addressed to Frederick W. Longfellow, who was then Thaw's lawyer, in November, 1903. In this letter Thaw wrote of "the row about the wedding," saying "the more rows the better." He added, "the matter of being married is most secret, as, if there should be a suit for kidnaping, it must not be mentioned."

This probably refers to Thaw's first marriage to Evelyn Nesbit abroad. In the same letter Thaw speaks of "her wretched mother," and frequently of the "blackguard," apparently meaning White. There is also a reference to Miss Nesbit as having been "poisoned at 15½." Thaw also writes of provision to be made for Evelyn Nesbit Thaw "if I die or I am killed."

The direct examination of Mrs. Thaw will be continued tomorrow morning, and it is expected that it will take her at least half the day to finish her story. There are more letters written by Thaw to be read, and then Mr. Jerome will take up the cross-examination of Mrs. Thaw. The task before him is not an easy one.

Hers a Terrible Story.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw proved a witness that will long be remembered in the Criminal Courts building. She told her terrible story more terrible than can be imagined by any who did not hear it, and more terrible than any type can make it appear, for the most part in a clear, sweet, level voice that reached every ear in the courtroom.

Only once in the long, wretched story did she break down. That point was reached when the questioning of Mr. Delmas had brought her recital to that night which she passed with Stanford White in an apartment on the southern side of West Twenty-fourth street, between Broadway and Sixth avenue. She bore up well until she told how, at Mr. White's insistence, she had drunk a glass of champagne which "tasted funny," she said, and how immediately after the room began to swim and everything turned black

Is Brave Through Ordeal.

At this point the witness paused, swallowed hard two or three times, and opened her lips to go on, but no words came. "I am extremely sorry," said Mr. Delmas, kindly, "but it is absolutely essential that you should continue your testimony in this line."

The frail little figure in the witness stand trembled a trifle and then dropped her face in her hands, silently and without any fuss. But it was half a minute or more before she looked up again. It required a little more prompting from Mr. Delmas before she could summon sufficient fortitude to proceed. But then she struggled on bravely to the end of her sordid tale.

Jurors Are Deeply Moved.

There is no question that her story produced the deepest impression upon the jurors and auditors. None of the jurors wept openly, but Mr. Brearly bled from his nose frequently, and all the other eleven wore an aspect of extreme solemnity. Some of the spectators who were not so undemonstrative were seen to wipe their eyes, while nearly all the women in court wept frankly and quietly.

A more girlish figure than that which came silently in through the door and up behind the jury box when Clerk Penny called the name of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw could scarcely be imagined. Perhaps an impartial observer might be pardoned for suspecting that no mean theatrical skill had been employed to achieve the effect of youth and innocence that now confronted the crowded courtroom.

Her Appearance Excites Pity.

Harry Thaw's young wife wore a loose jacket of dark blue such as many a schoolgirl wears, a dark hat of childish cut decorated with a bunch of violets. About her neck she wore a wide turned down collar of a modified Little Lord Fauntleroy design, and a soft lawn tie of black tied in a bow. Her hair, while not hanging loosely down her back, was half caught up and tied with a black ribbon in a sort of a puff at the back of her neck.

The courtroom saw her without a veil for the first time since the trial began. There was disclosed a pretty face, small of feature but regular in cut, a pair of large black eyes, soft and pleading; a pair of straight eyebrows of heaviest black; a mouth large but not unpleasing, whose lips parted to disclose two rows of white teeth. From beneath her black hair her small ears peeked out.

Awful Ordeal for Thaw, Too.

In her first answer to Mr. Delmas' inquiry one heard a voice of no mean attractiveness, soft and low and appealing. She spoke with just a trace of a lisp and with only slightest suggestion of the far famed Pittsburg "r." As she came from beside the jury box and placed her hand upon the book to take the oath her husband, sitting at the table with his lawyers, glanced in her direction. The next instant his eyes fell. He knew too well what was before both him and her.

Five minutes before, when Harry Thaw emerged from the prison pen into the courtroom at the call of "Harry K. Thaw to the bar," he had the air of a man who is going out to have the sentence passed upon him. His face was a pale yellow. His every movement unstable. His lips pale and twitching, his hair untidy, his eyes shifting nervously all the time and never resting for more than a moment on any given point. For he knew that his wife, in the hope of saving his life, was about to undergo a trial such as few women have ever known.

Listens with Face Hidden.

In the course of her harrowing testimony Thaw seldom looked directly at his wife. When it became most difficult to bear he bowed his face in his hands and it looked as if it required all his strength to control himself. His lawyers sat close about him so as to shield him as much as possible from the eyes of the spectators. But their efforts, while successful, were scarcely necessary, for the story that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was telling was so absorbing that for the time being no one had eyes for her husband.

When it was over there were expressions of wonder on every hand at the amazing fortitude of the frail little woman who told the story. She told the court that she was 22 years old, having been born in Dec. 25, 1884. She did not look a day over 17 years old. She was the picture of a Belasco ingenue and she kept that picture steady all day long.

White's Life Philosophy.

Aside from her story of the night when her life was wrecked, the portion of her testimony which the spectators evidently regarded as the most sensational related to what she said was told to her by Stanford White as a sort of philosophy of one department of his life. When she wept, she said, he told her not to worry, that it was all right—that "everybody did these things."

The main thing, he told her, was not to get found out. He told her, too, she said, why he liked her. It was because she was young and pretty and slim. He told her, she declared, that nothing was more disgusting than fat and that she must take care never to grow fat.

Throughout all her testimony the most extraordinary pains were taken to prevent the names of any other persons than herself, her husband, and Mr. White becoming public in connection with the repugnant details which she gave. This doubtless disappointed a large number of spectators, a number of whom were evidently drawn to the courtroom from motives of curiosity solely.

In consequence of this young Mrs. Thaw mentioned only two names in such a connection, one being a "Mr. Dillingham." But even that was taken from the record. At other times she would say "a certain young lady," "a certain gentleman," or "another young lady who was not there the first time."

As the afternoon advanced an atmosphere of ill concealed elation enveloped the table where Thaw's counsel sat. At the end of the day it was conceded on all hands that the defense had made rapid strides toward the successful termination of their fight.

Her Story Opens Quietly.

The opening portion of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's testimony was comparatively unimportant. It all related to that now famous dinner party at the Café Martin, when the Thaws dined with Thomas McCaleb and Truxtun Beale at a table from which they could see Stanford White as he sat at dinner with his young son out on the balcony that faces Fifth avenue. This was only two or three hours before Harry Thaw killed Mr. White on the roof garden, just across the square.

Young Mrs. Thaw said that she saw Stanford White enter the dining room from the door that leads to the Fifth avenue entrance and pass through the main dining room, through one of the open French windows, and out upon the balcony.

She was still sitting at her table with her husband and his friends when Mr. White and his son finished dinner and went out, as they had come in, on their way to the New Amsterdam theater, where the architect left his son, proceeding himself to the roof garden of Madison Square garden.

Note Incident Brought Up.

Mr. Delmas then came to the note so often referred to which young Mrs. Thaw scribbled at the table and passed to her husband, and, having established the fact that the witness had written such a note, asked her if what she wrote referred to Stanford White.

"Yes," said young Mrs. Thaw before the district attorney could object.

Mr. Jerome asked that that reply be stricken out on technical grounds and the court so ordered.

It is understood that this note was found in Harry Thaw's evening clothes when they were searched by somebody connected with the district attorney's office. Mr. Delmas on Wednesday made a demand upon the district attorney to produce it, but without avail. The assumption is that its contents were such as to excite Harry Thaw and that what his wife wrote will be held by the defense to have contributed largely to the state of mind that resulted in the killing of White. The witness said that she had never seen the note after she passed it to her husband. The court would not allow young Mrs. Thaw to tell what effect the note produced upon her husband. It is expected that the defense will produce other witnesses to testify that Thaw was much excited when he left the restaurant on his way to the roof garden.

Describes Visit to Roof Garden.

Young Mrs. Thaw went on to say that she and her husband arrived at the roof garden when the first act of "Mam'zelle Champagne" was still in progress. There a Capt. Wharton joined them and sat with them for a time. In her talk with her husband on the roof garden she said he seemed just the same as usual. Their conversation was general—about the play, for the most part.

Q.—Who suggested leaving the place? A.—I think I did.

Q.—The play was probably not interesting to you? A.—Not a bit.

Q.—And you suggested that you had better go? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now will you kindly describe to the jury how the party left—I mean, who was in the lead and what course you took to go out? A.—Well, we did not go immediately after that. We sat awhile longer, I think. Somebody else said something about it being a poor play and we might as well go out. I think it was Mr. Thaw himself. We all went out together.

Misses Husband; Sees White.

Q.—Who was in the lead? A.—I think it was Mr. McCaleb and myself.

Q.—Mr. Thaw and Mr. Beale following immediately behind you? A.—I think so.

Q.—How far had you gone when something unusual attracted your attention? A.—Well, we were almost to the elevator, and I was talking to Mr. McCaleb and turned around to say something to Mr. Thaw, and he was not there. Then I looked to see where he had gone, and I saw Stanford White sitting at a table.

Q.—How far were you at that time from Mr. White? A.—Well, about as far as from here to the end of the jury box.

Q.—You saw Stanford White seated there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Thaw at the same time? A.—I did not.

Q.—How long after that did you see Mr. Thaw? A.—About a minute after.

Sees Beginning of Tragedy.

Q.—Where was your husband then? A.—Standing near Mr. White, about as far from him as from here to where you are standing. About fifteen feet.

Q.—What was your husband doing? A.—He had his arm out like that (indicating the motion).

Q.—Did he move forward? A.—No, he stood still a little longer.

Q.—Did you hear any shots fired? A.—I did.

Q.—How many? A.—Three.

Q.—How soon after that? A.—Immediately. And I said to Mr. McCaleb, "My God, he has shot him!"

Q.—Did he say anything to you or did you say anything to him? A.—Yes, I said, "My God, Harry, what have you done—what have you done?" And he kissed me and said: "All right, I have probably saved your life." Then I think I heard Mr. McCaleb say: "God, Harry, you must have been crazy," or something like that. I don't remember particularly what happened after that. Mr. Beale and Mr. McCaleb took me away.

Tells How Thaw Wooed Her.

Mr. Delmas then abandoned the bloody story of the night of June 25, 1906, and led the witness to tell of her marriage to Harry Thaw. It took place, she said, in Pittsburg, at the home of the Rev. Dr. McGill, a Presbyterian minister of that city. The ceremony was performed by Dr. McGill April 4, 1905, nearly a year and three months before Thaw killed White. Her mother was present, as well as Harry Thaw's mother and his brother, Josiah Thaw, and Mr. Holman, the second husband of the witness' mother.

Still further back went Mr. Delmas, and he asked the ex-model to tell of Harry Thaw's wooing.

"The first time he proposed to me," she said, "was in June, 1903, in Paris."

Her Refusal a Confession.

Q.—At the time Mr. Thaw proposed to you did you accept his proposal or refuse it? A.—I refused it.

Q.—Did you state to him the reasons why you refused it? A.—I did.

Q.—Were those reasons based on any event in your life? A.—They were.

Q.—Were they based on any event with which Stanford White was connected? A.—They were.

There then began a long contest between Mr. Jerome and Mr. Delmas as to the admission of this line of testimony. The upshot of it was Mr. Jerome asked the court to instruct the jury this sort of testimony was admissible purely for the purpose of showing its effect on the mind of the witness' husband, on the theory that the defense proposed to prove that Harry K. Thaw was insane at the time he shot Stanford White.

Jerome Makes Bitter Fight.

Mr. Delmas at once replied with the statement that it was the intention of counsel for the defense to prove that Thaw was insane when he shot Stanford White, and Mr. Jerome then wished it made plain to the jury that the sort of evidence that it seemed the defense was trying to get from the witness was of the sort that the prosecution would be prevented from taking any legal steps to controvert.

The point was made that it was not material from a legal point of view whether what Harry Thaw's wife told Harry Thaw was true or not, but only that she did tell it to him and that he believed it to be true.

Mr. Jerome further wished it understood that the rules of evidence would not allow Mrs. Harry K. Thaw to tell her story as she had begun to tell it, except upon the distinct understanding that every statement she should make had been made by her at the time stated to Harry Thaw.

Defense Victorious in the End.

Again and again the district attorney arose to insist that steps be taken to leave no possible doubt on this point in the mind of Mrs. Harry Thaw. Apparently there was none left, for when repeatedly asked as to whether the particular fact she then was stating had been stated to Harry Thaw by her she invariably and promptly replied that she was telling the court only what she had told Harry Thaw in that long and passionate interview in Paris.

Before long, therefore, the district attorney remitted his interruptions, and the witness was allowed to tell her story with practically no interruptions save the encouraging words and queries of counsel for the defense.

"Mr. Thaw was sitting down opposite me," the wife continued, "and he suddenly said to me that he loved me and wanted to marry me, and I stared at him for a moment, and then he said: 'Don't you care for me? Don't you care anything about me?' And I said 'Yes.' And he said 'What is the matter?' and I said 'Nothing at all.' And he said 'Why won't you marry me?' And I said 'Because.' And then he said, 'Well, tell me why won't you; for what reason—why won't you marry me?'

Thaw's Love All-Forgiving.

"Then he leaned over me and put his hands on my shoulders and looked straight at me, and said: 'Is it because of Stanford White?' And I said, 'Yes.'"

"What was his manner when he put his hands on your shoulders and looked at you?" Mr. Delmas asked.

"He was very kind and nice, but he looked at me very straight. Then he sat down again and told me he cared more for me than he ever cared for any one else; that he never could love any other woman, and that if I would not marry him he would never marry any one else. Then he again asked me to marry him, and I started to——"

There was a dead silence in the courtroom as it was realized that at last the long expected life story of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was about to be told to its last vital particular.

Tells Him Her Life's Story.

After a brief pause the little woman continued:

"Then he told me again he loved me, and he would always take care of me, he would always see no harm ever came to me, and he wouldn't think any the less of me if I told him all about it, even if I didn't marry him. So I began by telling him how and where I had first met Stanford White. I told him that in the theater [the witness meant the Casino theater, where she had a small part in "Florodora"] a girl named Edna Goodrich had come up to me and asked me to go to a dinner party with some friends of hers. I told her——"

Girl Who Introduced Evelyn Nesbit to Stanford White, According to Testimony.

Edna Goodrich.

In her testimony Mrs. Thaw named Edna Goodrich as the girl who invited her to the "dinner party with some friends" at which she first met Stanford White, and later in her testimony, while on the subject of the cab ride to the Twenty-fourth street house, Mrs. Thaw again started to name Edna Goodrich. The latter has been prominent on the stage the last six or seven years. She was a member of the "Florodora" company, "The Rollicking Girl" company, played in "The Genius and the Model," in 1905, and more recently has been in vaudeville.

"Mrs. Thaw," interrupted Mr. Delmas, with great haste and emphasis, "will you permit me right here—you have mentioned the name of a certain lady whom I know not now. I request of you, if the request meets with the approval of the district attorney, that in giving your narrative you omit, unless it shall be insisted upon, the names of any other persons connected with any of these events except the name of Stanford White."

How She First Met White.

"That," said Mr. Jerome promptly, "is a proper request and I concur most thoroughly in it."

Then the court remarked: "Let the name be stricken from the record and the word 'young lady' be substituted."

"And you will be kind enough," repeated Mr. Delmas to the witness, "to bear in mind that in giving your narrative you are to omit giving the names of any persons excepting the name of Stanford White."

"Yes, sir, I will," said the witness faintly, and she continued: "This young lady asked me to go with some friends and I told her my mother wouldn't want me to go, but she came again and asked me again, so I said I would ask my mother. Mamma wouldn't let me go. Then this same young lady and another young lady came and asked me to go to a lunch party. They said the people were nice people and were in the best New York society, and that it would be all right. And they also asked my mother if I could go, and this time mamma consented."

Mother Decks Her for Sacrifice.

"Proceed, please," said Mr. Delmas kindly, as the witness hesitated.

"Well," went on young Mrs. Thaw, "this young lady came up for me one day in a hansom. Mamma dressed me and we got into the hansom cab and I remember hoping that we would go to the Waldorf, because I wanted to see it. But instead of that we went down Broadway and turned into West Twenty-fourth street and stopped at a little, dingy looking door. Edna Goo——"

Mr. Delmas raised a warning hand and the witness checked herself and went on: "This young lady got out of the hansom cab and asked me to follow."

Mr. Delmas took this occasion to fix the date. Young Mrs. Thaw said that she thought it was in August, 1901.

Child of 16 at That Time.

"You were then at that time," suggested Mr. Delmas, "16 years and some months old?"

"Yes, sir," said the little witness.

"You say that your mother dressed you on that occasion?"

"Yes, sir."

"The door opened without anybody opening it," she went on. "It opened itself and we went in through that door and then we went up some steps and another door opened in the same way. Then we went up some more steps and when we were about half way up I stopped and asked this young lady where we were going, and a voice called down—but I could not see who it was. Then she started upstairs and I followed. Then a man's voice called downstairs, but I could not see the man until we got to the top of the stairs."

First Sees "Big and Ugly Man."

She stopped, as if for help. She got it.

"Who was that man?" demanded Mr. Delmas in a dramatic voice.

"Stanford White," replied the witness, clearly.

"When we went into the room," she resumed, "there was a table set for four persons. The furnishings in the room were of velvet and fine, but I thought the man big and ugly."

Q.—You thought the man a brilliant man? A.—No, I thought this man was a big man and I thought he was ugly, and he asked us to take off our hats, and so we did.

Q.—Permit me—there was another gentleman there with him? A.—Not there then; another gentleman came a few minutes after.

Teased Because She Was So Young.

Q.—And I will request you now, so as to caution you, not to mention his name unless called for. A.—This other gentleman came in later and we sat down to the table, and I remember they teased me because my hair was down my back and I wore short dresses.

"This is what you told Mr. Thaw?" Mr. Jerome interjected.

"Yes, sir. He told me to tell him everything."

Q.—You still wore short dresses? A.—Yes, but not very short, they were up to my shoe tops. We had this luncheon party and then this other gentleman went away. He said he had business in Wall street and went away. Then we went up two more flights of stairs and got into another room, and in this room was a red velvet swing, and Mr. White put us in this swing and we would swing up to the ceiling.

Velvet Swing in White's Room.

Q.—"Put us"—by that you mean yourself and this other young lady? A.—Yes, turn about.

Q.—Then he would swing you? A.—Yes, he would push us and we would swing up to the ceiling. They had a big, Japanese umbrella on the ceiling, so when we were pushed up high our feet passed through.

Mr. Jerome bobbed up to declare again that the jury should be instructed that the purpose of this testimony was purely to show that the mind of the defendant was affected by the narration of these facts by the witness and that the rules of evidence did not permit any attempt to controvert the truth of these statements.

Court Refuses to Stop Story.

Mr. Delmas responded that the defense would interpose no objection to any attempt to prove the truth of what the witness had stated and was stating. To this Mr. Jerome replied that he would not be permitted to do so even if the evidence would allow him. The court merely directed counsel to proceed with the examination.

"Then after awhile Mr. White said he was a hard working man and had to go back to his office, but he would like to stay all day, and then told this young lady that he wanted to speak to her. They left the room and in a few moments came back, and there was some talk about a ride around the park in an automobile, and then this young lady was to go to a dinner. Shall I say the name?"

White's Deal with Her Mother.

Mr. Delmas said, hastily, that it was not necessary. Little Mrs. Thaw then went on to tell how she and this other young woman rode around the park and later went to call on a dentist, where the other young woman had something done to her teeth.

She was going on to tell about a letter Mr. White wrote to her mother, when Mr. Jerome objected, but Justice Fitzgerald overruled him, and the witness then said:

"This note was written to my mother, and asked her to call at 160 Fifth avenue. I remember the address, because I didn't know at first whether it was his office, or house, or what. Mamma thought it was rather queer, but she went, and when she came back she told me that Mr. White had asked her to go to a dentist and take me, but mamma said no; she thought it was a very strange thing to do. But Mr White said no; he had done that for nearly all the girls in "Florodora," and they had all gone, and it was nothing out of the way at all."

Mother Now White's Ally.

The witness told about another luncheon that she had in the same rooms in West Twenty-fourth street with Mr. White and some people not present on the first occasion.

"Before I told Mr. Thaw that," she went on, "I told him that Mr. Stanford White had sent me a hat and a boa—a hat and a feather boa and a long red cape. Mamma made me a new dress and sent it to the theater one night and told me I was invited to a surprise. I was to put on the new dress; the boa and the hat and a carriage was to be waiting for me on the north side of Thirty-ninth street by Park & Tilford's grocery store, that was there then.

"I put on this hat and dress and went across the street, and when I got there a man came out from the doorway of Park & Tilford's and it was Stanford White. We got into the carriage and drove to the Madison Square garden and went up in the elevator and into the tower to his apartments. Then there was another young lady there and another man."

Jerome in Significant Move.

Mr. Jerome arose and asked Mr. Delmas if he might inquire confidentially of the witness the names of these persons. "Certainly," said Mr. Delmas, and Mr. Jerome went over close to the witness stand and stood there while Evelyn Nesbit Thaw whispered the names into his ear.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Thaw into what room or apartment you had gone in the Madison Square tower? A.—I did; I told him it was in the part of the tower that Mr. White had.

Q.—His apartments? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he ask you to describe these apartments to him? A.—No, he said he had been there once.

White Respects Her at First.

Q.—You told him, as I understand you, that this party was perfectly proper? A.—Yes, that I had a nice time, and had supper there, and Mr. White wouldn't let me have but one glass of champagne. He said that a little girl was not to have more than one glass and that she must not stay up late and must be taken home to her mother, and he took me home to my mother, took me clear to the door of my apartment at the Algonquin hotel.

Q.—What time of the night would you say this was? A.—Half past 1 or quarter of 2.

Q.—Proceed, then? A.—I told Mr. Thaw there were three or four parties like that with the same people.

Q.—In the tower? A.—In the tower, all in the tower.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Thaw that they were all apparently proper parties? A.—Yes.

How White Won Mother Over.

Q.—You say the same persons were present at all these parties? A.—Yes, the same people.

Q.—That is, Mr. White, this other young lady whose name has not been mentioned, and another gentleman whose name has not been mentioned? A.—Yes.

Q.—What else did you tell Mr. Thaw about the events? A.—I told him that Mr. White came to call on mamma several times and asked if she wanted to go to Pittsburg to visit her friends there, and she said no, that she couldn't go and leave me all alone in New York, and he said that was perfectly right. And then he came again and saw mamma several times while I was there, and I remember hearing him say that it was not impossible for her to visit in Pittsburg if I was left in his care. He said she might go and leave me in New York in perfect safety and he would take good care of me, and he made me promise I would not go out with anybody but him.

"White a Grand Man," Woman Said.

"And mamma told me he was a grand man," she went on. "And afterward she went to Pittsburg and I remember he gave her the money to go. Then mamma went to Pittsburg and the next day, I think, after she left Mr. White sent a carriage for me at 10 o'clock in the morning and told me I was to come to the studio and have some photographs taken. So at 10 o'clock I got ready, went down stairs, and got in the carriage and went to his studio in East Twenty-second street."

Mr. Jerome here whispered to Mr. Delmas and the latter said, "I am requested by the district attorney to ask you to fix the date of that occurrence as nearly as you can remember it."

The witness said she thought it was in September, 1901—early in September, and that the other occurrences that she had spoken of were also in 1901, beginning in August.

How She Posed in Studio.

"When I got to Mr. White's studio this door, too, opened of itself, as I told Mr. Thaw, and the house looked like nobody lived there from the outside. Then when I got upstairs there was a man, a photographer that I knew, a photographer that I had posed for. He was there, and another man."

Q.—Now then, did you describe to Mr. Thaw what took place in that photograph studio?

A.—I said they showed me a dressing room, and I put on a gorgeous kimono, and they went out and I put on this Japanese kimono, and Mr. White said it came from Hongkong, and I posed for a long time.

Q.—And you described to Mr. Thaw the general appearance of those garments. A.—I did.

Q.—Kindly state what you said to him on the subject. A.—Well, he had seen the photographs of me taken at that time.

Posed Till She Was Weary.

Q.—Very well. Proceed. A.—And then I told him that this man took the photographs; that I had known him before and had posed before, and the other man carried the plates for the photographer. I posed a long, long time, and then I got tired, and Mr. White said that the photographer could go and the other man could go and send him some food. And then I went into the dressing room and shut the door, and took off the kimono, and put on my dress. Mr. White came and knocked at the door, and asked me if I needed any help, and I said no. Then when I got dressed I came out again, and there was some food in the studio. We sat down and ate, and Mr. White wouldn't let me have but one glass of champagne, and then he put me in a carriage and sent me back to the hotel.

Story Thrills Courtroom.

Q.—When you say "we," you mean yourself, Mr. White, and this other gentleman? A.—No, the other man had gone away.

Q.—You two had been left there alone? A.—Yes.

By this time it had become apparent that Mr. Delmas was leading the witness gradually up to the climax of her relations with the slain architect. Everybody in the courtroom sat up a little straighter in his chair, listened a little more intently, and whenever any incautious or careless person coughed or moved his chair, or made any other demonstration involving noise, he was frowned upon by everybody around him with almost unanimous ferocity.

So then Mr. Delmas and the witness came to the next night after the model had posed for Mr. White in the photograph studio. At counsel's suggestion, little Mrs. Thaw continued, haltingly and with an embarrassment every moment growing more painful, to tell the story the expectation of which had crowded the courtroom to its doors. It was the story upon which the defense undoubtly relies to save the life of Harry K. Thaw.

Whisper Story of Fateful Night.

"Then the next night after that," the young wife continued faintly, "I received a note from Mr. White at the theater asking me to come to a party and he would send a carriage for me—the carriage would be waiting. So after the theater I got into the carriage and was taken down to the Twenty-fourth street studio and when I got there the door opened and I got out and went upstairs and Mr. White was there, but no one else was there, and I asked him if the same people would be there who were at the other party.

"He said: 'What do you think, they have turned me down,' and I said, 'O, it's too bad. Then we won't have a party.'

"He said: 'They have probably gone off somewhere else and forgotten all about us.' And I said: 'I had better go home.' He said: 'No, we will sit down and have some food, anyhow, in spite of them'—that I must be hungry. So we sat down at the table, and I took off my hat and coat and I ate some of that food. Then I remember Mr. White going away again for awhile and coming back again."

White Shows Her His Den.

"So, after the supper, when I got up from the table, he told me that I hadn't seen all of his place, that they had three floors and there were some beautiful things in all the different rooms, and he would take me around and show them to me. So he went up another flight of stairs, not the one I had gone up before, but a little tiny back stairs, and came into a strange room that I hadn't seen before, and there was a piano in this room, paintings on the wall, and interesting cabinets all about, and we looked at this room for some time, and I sat down at the piano and played something.

"Mr. White asked me to come and see the back room, and he went through some curtains, and the back room was a bedroom, and I sat down at a table, a tiny little table—there was a bottle of champagne—a small bottle—and one glass.

Wine He Gives Her Drugged.

"Mr. White picked up the bottle and poured the glass full of champagne. I paid no attention to him because I was looking at a picture over the mantel, a very beautiful one that attracted my attention, and asked him who painted it, and he told me. Then he told me he had decorated this room himself and showed me all the different things about. It was very small.

"Then he came to me and told me to finish my champagne. I said I didn't care much for it. He insisted that I drink this glass of champagne, which I did. It was bitter and funny tasting, and I don't know whether it was a minute after or two minutes after, but a pounding began in my ears—a pounding and pounding. Then the whole room seemed to go around, and—and everything got—very black."

Shrinks from Describing End.

At this point young Mrs. Thaw's face began to twitch, an agonized look came into her eyes. She picked nervously at the fingers of one hand with the fingers of the other. Many an eye in the courtroom was averted from the young witness because the sight was too painful for endurance. After an effort to control herself little Miss Thaw suddenly buried her face in both her hands and silently wept. It was a full minute before she lifted her face.

"I do not desire," said Mr. Delmas, kindly, "to distress you any more than is necessary in this matter, but it is absolutely essential that you should go on with your testimony."

"Be Quiet; It's All Over Now"—White.

The witness, looking in some strange way, smaller, and frailer, and more girlish than ever, bit her lips a few seconds, and then went on:

"When I woke up all my clothes were pulled off me and I was in bed. I sat up in the bed and started to scream. Mr. White was there, and got up and put on one of his kimonos. The kimono was lying in a chair, and then I sat up and pulled some covers over me. There were mirrors all around the bed; there were mirrors on the side of the wall and on the top.

"Then I screamed, and screamed, and screamed, and he came over and asked me to please keep quiet, that I must not make so much noise. He said: 'It is all over now.' Then I screamed: 'O, no!' And then he brought a kimono over to me and went out of the room. Then as I got out of the bed I began to scream more than ever."

Gasps Out Piteous Story.

Young Mrs. Thaw here, under the gentle but insistent prodding of Mr. Delmas, described conditions which cannot be published in a newspaper. She spoke in a low tone, the words coming from her lips as though forced out between gasps. When she had finished it was plain that she was near a breakdown. However, she rallied and went on:

"I don't remember how I got my clothes on or how I went home, but he took me home. Then he went away and left me, and I sat up all night."

Delmas Pitilessly Insistent.

Unwillingly, pitilessly, Mr. Delmas persisted.

"Where was Mr. White, madam, at the time when you regained consciousness? You say that you found that you had been stripped. Did you describe to Mr. Thaw where White was?"

"Yes," quavered the witness, "he was there beside me."

"Dressed or undressed?" went on Mr. Delmas, and young Mrs. Thaw replied: "Undressed."

But Mr. Delmas had one more inquiry.

"Completely so?" he asked. Little Mrs. Thaw looked steadily at the ceiling. There was a long pause. Then she said: "Yes."

"Don't Worry," White's Consolation.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Thaw what took place between yourself and White up to that time? A.—Yes. I told him that I went home at once. I don't know how I got home, but I know Mr. White took me. Next day Mr. White came to see me, and got down on his knees beside me and picked up the end of my dress and kissed it. I did not look at him, but sat staring out of the window. After awhile he said: "Why don't you look at me child?" I said: "Because I can't."

"Then he began to talk to me. He told me that I must not be worried; that everything was all right. He said that he thought I had the most beautiful hair he had ever seen. He said he would do a great many things for me. He said that everybody did these things. He said——"

The slim figure sitting in the witness chair swayed slightly. The little woman passed one hand over her eyes and her lips twitched.

Laughs at Her Misery.

At last, seeing there was no help for it, she plunged in again: "He said he liked me because I was so young and pretty, and slim. He said there was nothing so disgusting as fat, and that I must never get fat. And then I looked at him and said, 'Does everybody know you do these things?' And he said 'Yes,' and the first thing I could think of was the sextet—the Florodora sextet. I asked him if the sextet did these things. He sat down and laughed, and laughed, and laughed. Then he said: 'That is a good thing.'

"Then I asked him about several people and he said, 'They all do.' He said that when I went to the theater again I should watch them and I did and I saw that they did these things.

Makes Her Vow Secrecy.

"He said the great thing in this world was not to be found out; that I must be very clever about it. He made me swear that I would not tell my mother; that people did not talk about these things and did not tell about them.

"He said that some girls at the theater were very foolish and got talked about. He said that they ought to see how the society women understood and how they realized that the great thing in this world was not to get found out. He spoke of several who were very clever about it. He said they understood it, and I thought I must never tell anybody anything about it."

"Did you ask any explanation of this stupor you had fallen into?" asked Mr. Delmas.

"Yes; I asked Mr. White about it, and he asked me not to ask him anything about it; that it was all right, and that I must not worry."

Story's Effect on Thaw.

What was the effect of this statement of yours upon Mr. Thaw? A.—He was excited. He would get up and walk up and down the room a minute and then come and sit down and say: "O God, O God," and bite his nails—like that—and keep sobbing.

Q.—Sobbing? A.—Yes; it was not like crying—it was a deep sob. He kept saying "Go on, go on, tell me the whole thing—all about it."

Q.—How long did that scene last, Mrs. Thaw?

A.—Why, we staid there all night and sat up all night in that room. He sat there. He walked up and down, and every now and then he would come and ask me some particular thing about it, and he asked me a great many questions about mamma. He tried to find out whether mamma knew anything about it, and I said she did not.

Says Her Mother Didn't Know.

She thought, like a great many other people, that Mr. White was a noble man, kind hearted and noble, and I said she knew nothing about that. And then Mr. Thaw made up his mind that mamma was foolish, and had been fooled by these letters, and said that it was not really her fault, only in the beginning she should never have accepted anything from him, never should have taken any flowers and presents—and that she ought to have known better than to let me go out with an old married man.

Q.—After you had stated this occurrence, and the reason why you could not accept Mr. Thaw's offer of marriage, did he renew his offer, or break it off? A.—Not that night; but that night he told me that any decent person who heard that story would say it was not my fault; that whatever happened was not my fault, and I was simply a poor, unfortunate little girl, and that he did not think anything less of me, but, on the contrary, he said that I must remember he would always be my friend, and no matter what happened he would always be my friend.

Thaw Sits in Abject Misery.

All this time, while Mr. Delmas was getting, step by step, word by word, phrase by phrase, from Harry Thaw's wife the story upon which the defense relied to explain to the last pitiful detail the cry that Harry Thaw made the night he shot Stanford White—"He ruined my wife"—Harry Thaw was sitting outside the rail, face to face with the slender woman who told it. Most of the time his face was buried in his hands, his head sunk forward till his chin almost touched his breast. Now and then his shoulders shook convulsively. He did not look up again until this part of the recital was past.

Mrs. Thaw went on to say that two months later Harry Thaw again asked her to marry him, again saying that it was all no fault of hers, and that again she declined.

She Reveals Thaw in New Light.

"I told him several times after that," she said, "that if I married him Stanford White and his friends would always laugh at him and make fun of him, because the people in the theater are quick to catch on to that sort of thing, and that they all suspected more or less, and I told him, and said it would not be right for us to get married; that as soon as I got able to dance (I had been ill) I would go back to the theater.

"When I said that Mr. White had told me that everybody did these things he said it was not true—that it was all a dirty lie. He said there were lots of decent women in the world; that he had two lovely, decent sisters and a lovely mother. He said it was a dirty lie. I said that it would not be a good thing for us to marry; that I had been on the stage, for one thing, and had been to a great many parties with Stanford White.

"I said if he had met me in Pittsburg, before I came to New York, it might have been all right. He kept saying that he could not care for anybody else, he could not possibly love anybody else; that his whole life was ruined; he could not marry anybody and he said he would not marry anybody else."

Poverty of Her Early Life.

Little Mrs. Thaw then went on under the questioning of Mr. Delmas to give an account of her life up to the time she met Stanford White. She said that she was born in Pennsylvania, up the Allegheny river, and when she was about 8 years old the family moved to Pittsburg, where her father died. She added: "My mother had to go to court often on account of the condition of father's affairs. We didn't understand what it was all about, but after a time the money was all gone, and then mamma let rooms, but it did not pay. Mamma was always worried about the rent. Sometimes we would not have enough to eat. From there we went to my grandmother's to live, and at that time we didn't have any money at all.

"Then mamma borrowed some money and rented a house on South Highland avenue and let some rooms in that, because I remember my brother and mother and myself all had to sleep in one room. Then after awhile that didn't pay also. Mamma got away back in the rent, and I think the sheriff came and put a sign on the door that all the furniture was to be sold, and I remember we had a terrible time.

Begins Posing at 15.

"Then Mr. Holman came to our rescue and paid this rent that mamma owed and mamma went to Philadelphia and left us with my aunt. Then she sent for us and we came back to Allegheny to a family that had known my mother and her people and they put us on the train and gave the conductor instructions that we were to be put off at Philadelphia. I was about 15 then. We traveled all alone and had a lot of difficulties with a cat which we had with us. The conductor wanted to put it off and we cried, and he finally let us keep it."

In Philadelphia the witness said she met one or two artists and photographers and posed for them, and one of them, when the family moved to New York, gave her a letter of introduction to Carroll Beckwith. She posed for various artists in New York and gave all the money she made to her mother. Sometimes Mr. Holman helped the family and her mother tried to get some kind of a job and couldn't.

Often Had to Go Hungry.

"And," said the witness, "we lived in a little back room on the second floor of a house in West Twenty-second street, and things got very bad indeed. We didn't have anything to eat sometimes for days but bread; then we looked up Mr. Beckwith, and he got me to pose for him and told me I was not the sort of girl that ought to go knocking on studio doors; that he would give letters to reputable artists, and I was never to go and knock on studio doors, the way models do."

She added that she posed for F. S. Church, Herbert Morgan, Charles Brandt, the Sarony firm of photographers, and others. She made about $17 or $18 a week. Then she told how a reporter got her photograph and published it, and then she got a letter from Ted Marks, the theatrical manager, who introduced her to John C. Fisher, who was then managing the "Florodora" company. Her mother didn't want her to go on the stage, but she went to see Mr. Fisher and showed him the letter.

Goes on Stage as Child.

"He looked me over," said little Mrs. Thaw, "and then he said his theater was no baby farm, and he said if they put me on the Gerry society would be after them, and I cried and said I wanted to go on. Finally Mr. Fisher engaged me, but told me I must be careful and not tell people how old I was."

Q.—What else did you tell Mr. Thaw. A.—I told him that I had posed for artists, and what ones, and he said that I had posed for a lot of old fogies and stiffs.

First Meeting with Thaw.

She said she met Harry Thaw first about Christmas time, 1901, when she was 17 years old, and that Thaw came to see her often at the Audubon hotel.

"He said I was too young to be on the stage and ought to be sent to school. He offered to send my brother to school," she said.

She continued to see Mr. Thaw for some time, and early in 1902 she went to a school in Pompton, N. J. Mr. White, she said, looked up this school and made arrangements for her to go there.

Her Illness at School.

Q.—While you were at school there, did you say you were ill? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had to have an operation performed? A.—Yes.

Q.—When was that time that you were taken ill? A.—The early part of May, 1903.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Thaw at that time? A.—I did.

Q.—Where did you see him? A.—I saw him when I was sick in bed.

Q.—Will you please describe to the jury what Mr. Thaw did when he saw you there in bed? A.—Well, the doctors had told him that I would have to be etherized, and that I was sick. Something bad happened, and then they had to find out what it was. They did not tell me what it was. They all went out of the room, and Mr. Thaw came in. He did not say a word to me, because I was too sick to talk. I could not talk, and he knelt down beside the bed and kissed my hand, and just looked at me for a moment, and then went out. He was the last person I saw before they gave me ether, except the doctor. The operation was performed at the school, not at the hospital.

Thaw Always Loyal to Her.

Q.—Did you see him again at the school? A.—No. I saw him the next time at the hospital.

Q.—Did Mr. Thaw on that occasion bring you anything? A.—Yes, he brought me fruit and flowers, and told me he had made arrangements that several things were to be sent to me—chicken several times a week, and flowers—O, flowers came every day.

In May, 1903, the witness said, she and her mother went to Europe. Mr. Thaw followed on another boat and met them in Paris. She did not come back to this country until October, 1903.

Mr. Jerome and Mr. Delmas had a long controversy about a letter Mr. Delmas desired to offer, which, he said, showed Harry Thaw's mental state at that time. It finally was agreed to let the matter go over to another time.

Delmas Pleads for Rest for Her.

At that time it was half-past 12, and Mr. Delmas said:

"If your honor please, it is a long and trying ordeal for this unfortunate young person, and, as it will be my disagreeable duty to examine her still at some length, will your honor grant us an adjournment now?"

"If you are not through with this witness," said Justice Fitzgerald, "you may go on with some other branch of the case," but Mr. Jerome interposed.

"I think," said he, "it would be no more than fair, if your honor please, as the witness is going through this long ordeal, that she be given a little longer time than is usual at the recess hour."

A murmur of appreciation buzzed about the courtroom as Justice Fitzgerald nodded his assent and declared the court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Mob Besieges Courtroom.

The fact that Mrs. Thaw was telling on the stand the story of the events that led up to the killing of Stanford White by her husband had become generally known and there was a great fight to get into the courtroom at the afternoon session. A strong line of policemen had been made at all of the entrances leading to the courtroom door, but a fighting, struggling mob of men and women began to gather an hour before the courtroom doors were open.

The women were shoved back and thrust aside, but some of them, perhaps two dozen, managed to get in. Long before Thaw had been brought over from the Tombs the courtroom was jammed.

Thaw's face was not quite so drawn as when he came in for the morning session, and as he sat down he nodded to his brother, Edward Thaw, the only member of the family in the courtroom. Even the court officers were up in the air, for a false alarm that Justice Fitzgerald was not going on the bench brought everybody to their feet. By the time they had settled back and were again speculating on what Mrs. Evelyn Thaw's story would bring out in the afternoon Justice Fitzgerald came in with Justice Francis S. Scott.

Delmas Wastes No Time.

Without any preliminaries, Mr. Delmas brought up the question of the admissibility of the letter sent by Thaw to Frederick W. Longfellow of the firm of Delafield & Longfellow, who was counsel for Thaw up to not long ago. Mr. Delmas started to quote law on the admissibility of the letter, when Mr. Jerome said suddenly, "We withdraw our objection."

Mr. Delmas offered the letter in evidence, and Mr. Jerome asked to see it. Mr. Delmas protested that he had not been allowed to see a transcript of that statement made by Thomas McCaleb in the district attorney's office, which was referred to at Wednesday's session, but it was explained to Mr. Delmas that he had objected after the statement had been offered in evidence and then the statement was withdrawn.

Jerome Lets Letter In.

Mr. Delmas was a little confused over the situation, but he handed the letter over to Mr. Jerome, who scrutinized it carefully, with Mr. Garvin leaning over his shoulder. After reading the letter Mr. Jerome made no objection, and Mr. Delmas read it to the jury. It said:

Dear Longfellow: Kept Mistress N. three months in London at a cost of $1,000. Dear Mrs. Nesbit sails tomorrow for New York. She thinks I kidnaped her 17½ years old daughter. It is well known that I always did my best to be good to her daughter.

She allowed her daughter, unwittingly, I believe, to be ruined by a blackguard when she was 15 2-3 years old. For the present don't trouble except to find her address from the Algonquin hotel on Forty-fourth street, then telephone her incognito and find out all you can about her—everything she is doing. H. K. T.

Jerome Warns the Jury.

Attached to this letter was a slip of paper which had evidently been written by Thaw as a second thought. It said: "If you cannot read this, never mind. Try to find out all you can and cable me at my expense."

It appeared later that the writing was not very distinguishable, and that Thaw expected Mr. Longfellow to have some difficulty in reading it. When the letter had been read, Mr. Jerome again repeated to the court his admonition to the jury that the letter was not admissible except as to the possible effect it might have had on Thaw's mind, and that the truth or falsity of it could not be contradicted by the prosecution.

Fight Over Second Letter.

Thereupon Mr. Delmas handed up a second letter, which gave Mr. Jerome a lot of trouble in making out. Finally he had to take it to the light and then get a transcript of it from the defense to compare it with the original. Having done all this, he objected to its being admitted because, he said, no date was fixed. That brought a long argument from Mr. Delmas, and finally Mrs. Thaw, who had been called to the stand, was asked if she was familiar with her husband's handwriting. She wore the same costume of the morning session but her face was slightly paler, which only added to her girlishness. There were dark circles under her eyes, and, although her voice had lost none of its clearness and strength, there were evidences of the strain that she had been under.

Wife Confused Over Letters.

Mr. Jerome said she was not an expert and could not testify to the handwriting. A few questions from Mr. Jerome brought out that she had received letters from Thaw since 1903 up to the shooting, but she could not say whether any of the letters were in existence. Before she answered, however, she paused and seemed just a bit puzzled what to do.

Then Mr. Jerome said that if such letters were in existence they should be shown to the jury, which could compare them with the letters which Mr. Delmas wanted to offer. Justice Fitzgerald took the same view, and the letter was simply marked for identification, Mr. Delmas adding that he would call Mr. Longfellow later so as to fix the date of the letter then in question and a bunch of others which he held in his hand.

Takes Up Her Story Again.

That disposed of, Mr. Delmas recalled to Mrs. Thaw that she returned from Europe in the latter part of the year 1903. She said that she came back before he did and that she left him in Europe. It was some time at the end of October or the beginning of November when she got here. Mr. Delmas tried to get in the fact that somebody met her at the pier and after a little trouble she told him that before she left Europe she had had a conversation with Thaw on the subject of some one meeting her when she arrived here. Thaw, she said, told her he would have his lawyer, a Mr. Longfellow, meet her, so that she could get through the custom house without any trouble. Thaw had given her one letter, which she gave to Mr. Longfellow. Several weeks after that she saw Thaw at the Hotel Navarre for the first time since she returned from Europe. She explained that she did not see him alone, that she sent word that she would not see him unless somebody else was there.

Meets Thaw with Lawyer.

"And therefore he came up to you in company with another person?" said Mr. Delmas.

"You need not mention the name of that person unless Mr. Jerome desires it."

"I don't know whether he came with this man," she said, leaning forward so that nothing she said would be missed. "Mr. Thaw came into the room and sat down beside me. I was sitting on a trunk, and Mr. —this other man—stood by the window, I think, and I asked him not to go out of the room."

"Without mentioning his name," interrupted Mr. Delmas, "this man was a member of the bar of this city, a gentleman of good standing and reputation here."

Stories She Heard About Thaw.

"Yes, he was," she said, continuing her story. "Mr. Thaw came over and sat down beside me. He said: 'What is the matter with you?' and I said: 'I don't care to speak with you, because I have heard certain things about you, and knowing these things I don't care to speak to you.'

"He asked me what was the matter, he did not understand. He asked again, 'What is the matter?' and I told him I had heard certain stories about him that were dirty stories. The man that told me—I won't mention his name—told me that he (Thaw) had put a girl in a bathtub and poured scalding water on her, and I also said that another person told me that he took morphine and that he was crazy, that he was in the habit of taking girls and tying them to bed posts and beating them. I did not mention to him at the time the names of the persons, but I did tell him later. Mr. Thaw shook his head sadly and said——"

Mind Poisoned by White.

"Sadly, you said," repeated Mr. Delmas, roaring out the words.

"Yes, sir," she replied, "and then he said, 'Poor little Evelyn (pronounced by her Evelyn). I see that they have been making a fool of you. I also told him that Mr. Stanford White had taken me to Mr. Abraham Hummel's office, and that they had shown me some documents, or, rather, read part of a document to me, and showed me his signature, and it was supposed to be a case that had been brought—a suit, rather—that had been brought against Mr. Thaw by one of these persons.

"I told Mr. Thaw all that, and he said it was blackmail; that he wouldn't pay any attention to it whatever; that it was a case of pure blackmail, and that there was nothing to it; that if I wanted to believe such things I could. That interview lasted about ten minutes."

Thaw's Name for Her "Angel."

"And did you persist to the end in your refusal in having anything to do with him; and will you kindly tell the jury how you parted, or what was said at the parting?" said Mr. Delmas.

"I think he kept my hand," she said, "and he said, whatever I did, that he would always care most for me, and I would always be an angel to him."

The young woman sort of dropped back in her chair and sighed. Mr. Delmas waited for a moment.

"Do you remember that word distinctly," he said, "and let me ask you whether that term of endearment was one which was commonly used by him in speaking to you or of you."

"Yes," she said, "he always used that word. He called me 'angel,' then we parted."

Disliked Rouge on Her Face.

She didn't see Thaw again for some time, she said, and for two weeks or more, maybe. She went into a drug store at Broadway and Thirty-sixth street.

"I think I was in there having some ice cream soda, and he came in and he saw me and he spoke to me, and then he went out again," she explained. "But before he went out he told me that I looked bad; that I didn't look well. And I said I wasn't very well. And he said that I ought not to put any rouge on my face; that I was not the kind that could wear it; that it didn't look well on me; that I never should put any rouge on my face. I told him I put it on because I was very pale. He said it didn't look nice."

"And then there was no reconciliation at that time?" said Mr. Delmas.

"No, sir; not a bit," she replied.

Thaw's Fight for Reconciliation.

After that she met him on the street in Broadway—"Brod-way" she called it. Thaw was with somebody, merely spoke, and went on. A short time after she was at the Café Beaux Arts, at Fortieth street and Sixth avenue, having dinner one evening when Thaw came into the restaurant.

"I was surprised to see him," she said, "as I did not know that he was to be there. I was there with a girl, I won't mention her name [Mr. Jerome leaned over and she whispered it to him]. This young lady came after me and asked me to dine there, but she did not tell me that Mr. Thaw was to be there. Mr. Thaw came over. I was going into a play called "The Girl from Dixie," and I think it was going to open that night, I don't remember exactly, and he said that I looked bad and he didn't think I was able to dance.

"He said he wished I would not go into that play and I said I would, and then he said if I would keep away from the theater he would pay any salary that I was receiving and would do it heartily, and he wished merely for the sake of my health that I wouldn't go to the theater. His manner was kind. I said I would go—that I would go to the theater."

Tells of Talk at Luncheon.

"And at that time," interrupted Mr. Delmas, "did you have any other means of making a livelihood?"

"No, sir."

"And that fact was known to Mr. Thaw?"

"I think so," she said.

Thaw had dinner with them and then she went to the theater. This meeting was the time before Christmas, 1903. The next meeting was about two days later, when the same girl was along. This was at lunch at Rector's. She was asked to tell what happened then.

"Why," she said, "I asked this girl, I think we both asked her, if she would excuse us while we talked a few moments. Then Mr. Thaw—she didn't retire, she turned her back so that she could not hear—and Mr. Thaw asked me if I believed the stories that I had heard. He told me he wanted me to tell him every story that I had heard, and I did."

Tells Stories She Heard to Thaw.

"You must take the trouble, if you please, not in a general way as you have stated, but to repeat as near as you can recall exactly what you told Mr. Thaw on that occasion, leaving out always the names of the parties that may have been involved in the matter," Mr. Daimas said.

"I told him the one about the bath tub, that this man had told me that he had taken a girl, put her in a bath tub, and run scalding water on her," she replied.

Q.—Did you give the name of the man who had told you that? A.—Yes, and then I told him the next one—the next story I heard. I gave the name of this man. I won't mention it now. (She whispered the name to Mr. Jerome.)

Told Her by Stanford White.

Q.—And what was that story?

A.—This story was that he (the man who told the story) lived in a hotel and at one time in this hotel he had heard loud shrieks and screams and ran to the assistance of some one; he had burst into this room and that there was Harry Thaw in this room with a girl tied to a bed post and he was beating her with a horsewhip, I told Mr. Thaw that story. I gave him the name of the man who told me that story.

Q.—Now, what other story did you relate to Thaw, to this defendant. A.—I told him every story that Stanford White had told me. He said that Mr. Thaw took morphine, that he was in the habit of taking morphine, that he knew—Mr. White said he knew it, and that while under the influence of morphine he would do these terrible things and also repeated the same story about the bathtub that this friend of his had told me.

Hatred, Thaw's Explanation.

Q.—Then the man that had told you the bath tub story was a friend of Stanford White? A.—O, yes. I think that was about all that I heard. I can't remember that I told Mr. Thaw anything more then.

"And now," said Mr. Delmas, "after you had related to Mr. Thaw these various reports that you had heard about him, what reply did he make?"

"He said about the first story," continued Mrs. Thaw, "the bath tub story, that this friend of Stanford White had told me, that he could easily understand why he told me—because this man hated him, was a friend of Stanford White, and he (Thaw) merely laughed about it. He said it was crazy.

"About the second story he said he could not understand this man having told it, as he didn't know him to be a friend of Stanford White, and he couldn't understand why this man made up such a story. But about the stories that Stanford White had told me he said he could easily understand why that was."

"He said he could easily understand why Stanford White and Hummel had told you stories?" said Mr. Delmas.

Thaw Denies Morphine Habit.

"Yes," she replied, "and he said he had no business believing these stories, that I had known him some time in Europe, and I had reason to know that they were not so. And then he asked me if I had ever seen him take morphine, and I said no. He said if he had taken morphine wouldn't it have shown itself some time or other?"

The witness stopped. With her right hand she made a movement as though she were jabbing something at her wrist, evidently intending to illustrate what Thaw had done when he spoke to her about morphine.

White Tried to Convince Her.

"And I could not remember having seen anything like that," she said, "and I told Stanford White that I never knew Harry took morphine. Mr. White said that (Mr. Jerome held up his hand and asked her if she had repeated to Thaw what White had told her. She said she had and she was allowed to go on). I said to Mr. White that I never had seen Mr. Thaw under the influence of morphine and Mr. White said there was a lot of other ways of taking it. (She again made the wrist jabbing movement.) And he said that you could smell it up your nose or take a hypodermic syringe. Thaw laughed and said Mr. White knew a lot more about it than he did."

"Did Mr. Thaw on that occasion invite and urge you to investigate into the truth of the stories that had been told of him?"

"Yes."

Q.—Did he tell you to go forth and investigate them? A.—He offered to go with me to each of these places.

Lets a Name Slip Out.

As a result of that she made an investigation of the stories on her own hook, although she was not allowed to tell the details. Having made the investigation, she met Thaw at Rector's, and she told him what she had found out. In the meantime she had seen the man who had told her the story about the incident of the girl and the bedpost in a hotel. She started to tell the story she got from the man and she dropped the man's name. It sounded to those who were near enough to hear like "Mr. Dillingham."

As the name left her mouth she fell back in her chair, looked startled, like a naughty little girl who had been caught by her mother in the pantry taking some jam. Her hand went to her mouth and she pressed her lips together. If it was a piece of acting it was cleverly done.

All the time she looked at Mr. Jerome, apparently feeling that he was going to rebuke her. He said not a word. Mr. Delmas came to her rescue. It was evidently a slip of the tongue, he said, and he warned her to be more careful. The name was stricken from the record by Justice Fitzgerald.

"It was a different story that this man told me this time," she said. "It was a very different story. I told him that I had seen the man. I gave the man's name to Mr. Thaw, and I asked him to tell me the story again. This time he said it was a waiter that had told him the story. He didn't see it himself. He said the waiter had come down to the table in the restaurant where he was sitting. I asked him what hotel it was, and he said he didn't know.

"The first time—that is, the first time he told me the name of the hotel. The second time he didn't seem to know. I asked him more and more, and he said, 'What are you so interested in this for?' and I said, 'Because I want to know.' And I said, 'The first time you told me a different one. Now you tell me another one,' and he just laughed at me and said, 'You didn't believe that, did you?' I said, 'I certainly did,' and he laughed again, and said, 'I just told you that to please some one.' Then I told Mr. Thaw about that, and after that I asked him what sort of a man he was."

Recalls Anger at Yarns.

She also told Thaw that she had asked other persons about what sort of a man the author of the story was.

On that occasion she did not tell him anything about the bath tub story or who was the author of what she had told him about it before, she said. "I remember," she added, "I was angry with the man who had circulated the story."

That statement was stricken out on Mr. Jerome's motion, and Mr. Delmas said:

"Let me again question you so that we may avoid these very proper interruptions. It is only what you told Mr. Thaw that is admissible. Your own feelings against this man who had deceived you are, for the present, immaterial unless you manifested them to Mr. Thaw. Now, then, subsequently you discussed the other stories you had heard—and discussed with him what results you had reached upon investigation?"

Thaw Never Lied, She Says.

Mrs. Thaw seemed penitent and said she would try to do better. After that, she said, she had a number of conversations with Thaw, but she couldn't remember much about them because each time the stories were discussed. She couldn't remember whether she had told Thaw anything more than what she had told on the stand.

"But you told him, as the final upshot," said Mr. Delmas, "that there was nothing in these stories?"

"I told him," she said, positively, "that I could find nothing in these stories and that the man who had told me told two different stories, and then Mr. Thaw said to me, 'You know I never lie,' and I said 'No,' because he never told me a lie in his life that I know of."

Hummel's Name Brought In.

Then there came an interruption in the girl's story. Mr. Delmas said that Mr. Longfellow, who had been sent for, was in the courtroom, and he wanted him to testify about the letters, but it seemed that the information was not quite correct, and Mr. Delmas went on with his examination of the witness.

Q.—You have mentioned, madam, the name of Mr. White in connection with that of a well known lawyer here, Mr. Hummel. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Thaw, your husband, relating to any incident in your life in which Stanford White and Abram Hummel had jointly figured? A.—Yes, I had a great many conversations.

Q.—Will you kindly tell the jury the sum and substance of those conversations? A.—Do you mean to begin with the first one?

Q.—I am sorry to trouble you, but it is unavoidable. A.—This was when I lived at the Grand hotel. I cannot tell whether it was in the morning or in the afternoon or in the evening that we first began to talk about it.

Mr. Jerome wanted to know when this conversation took place.

She said it was in 1904, whereupon Mr. Delmas said that for the time being he would withdraw the question, as he did not want to change the chronological order of the events prior to the Christmas eve, 1903. That is the night on which a witness named Boman, doortender at the Madison Square theater, says that White made a threat against Thaw.

In response to another question Mrs. Thaw said that she had not had conversation relative to Thaw with White and Hummel prior to Christmas eve. Then she went on to say that on Christmas eve she was in the theater playing "The Girl from Dixie," and that Thaw came to see her in her dressing room. She got to the point of saying that she saw Stanford White several times that night when Mr. Longfellow appeared. Mrs. Thaw, who didn't seem to be fatigued, left the stand to make way for Mr. Longfellow.

Gleason Takes Hand in Case.

For the first time since Mr. Delmas became captain of the Thaw defense Mr. Gleason took a hand in the examination. He handed Mr. Longfellow a batch of papers and asked him if he recognized the handwriting on them. Mr. Jerome asked to have them identified separately, and Mr. Gleason said: "I thought I could save time by lumping them," but they were taken in order at the suggestion of Justice Fitzgerald.

The first letter Mr. Longfellow said was in Thaw's handwriting. He said it was received by him prior to the shooting of White. Then Mr. Jerome butted in. He asked Mr. Longfellow if his firm was counsel for Thaw, and Mr. Longfellow said "not now." It was recalled that soon after Thaw's arrest Mr. Louis L. Delafield, who had been appearing for him, dropped out of the case. Mr. Longfellow said that the letter came to him as counsel for Thaw.

Jerome Objects in Vain.

Then began a fight by Mr. Jerome against the admission of the letters. Mr. Jerome said that, unless Thaw waived the privilege between client and counsel, not alone in regard to these particular papers but also everything that passed between Thaw and his counsel, he would object to Mr. Longfellow testifying about the letters at all. But Mr. Jerome didn't make good his point right then, and he began an examination of Mr. Longfellow, with whom he seemed to be on friendly terms.

While this was going on William Rand Jr., who was Mr. Jerome's chief of staff, sat close to Mr. Jerome. At times he and Mr. Jerome had a little chat. There was some talk that Mr. Jerome might have called in Mr. Rand to help him in the case, but it was said that that was not so. About the time that Mrs. Thaw left the stand Justice Scott went out, too, but his place had been taken by Justice Norman S. Dyke of Brooklyn.

Lawyer Longfellow on Stand.

Mr. Longfellow didn't show any great desire to tell Mr. Jerome just how he had received the letters. First he said he had received them by mail.

"From the defendant?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"How can I tell?" replied Mr. Longfellow. "I can tell you whether the defendant wrote it or not."

Mr. Jerome wanted to know what had become of the envelope to the letter. Mr. Longfellow said it was doubtless destroyed. Mr. Jerome seemed to think Mr. Longfellow's answer queer, because as a practicing attorney he said that Mr. Longfellow should know whether the letter came to him through the instrumentality of Thaw. A long argument followed on the question of whether Mr. Longfellow should be allowed to disclose anything that came to him from a client. Justice Fitzgerald read the law, which says that "an attorney or counselor at law cannot be allowed to disclose communications made by his client to him."

Fierce Duel Over Letter.

In reply to a series of questions from Mr. Jerome, Mr. Longfellow still insisted that he received the letter by mail while he was attorney for Thaw and it was in Thaw's handwriting, but otherwise he could not say anything about it. Mr. Jerome kept firing away at Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Delmas keeping up a cross fire of objections, until finally Mr. Jerome got down to the point of asking Mr. Longfellow if he had made a search for the envelopes to other letters. Mr. Longfellow declared that he had made no search.

Mr. Delmas contended that it didn't make any difference how the letter or letters came to Mr. Longfellow so long as they were in the handwriting of Thaw. Eventually Mr. Delmas again asked if the particular letter which Mr. Longfellow had in his hand was written prior to the shooting of White. Mr. Jerome objected, saying that it was a communication between attorney and client, that an attorney could not testify to unless Thaw permitted.

Judge Can't Scare Delmas.

"It was for the client to determine whether the privilege is waived," said Justice Fitzgerald, "and for the court subsequently to determine if it has been waived, and to what extent it has been waived. You are asking the question at your peril; if it opens the door or if it does not open the door."

"I am willing to take the risk," said Mr. Delmas, with a bow and a smile.

Mr. Longfellow was then allowed to answer the question, and having done so Mr. Jerome again quizzed him about when and how he received it. It was finally received in evidence, and then, one by one, Longfellow was asked about seven other letters. Each time he had to go through a cross examination by Mr. Jerome, the same examination in regard to each letter, before he was allowed to identify them. Once Mr. Jerome seemed to think that Mr. Longefellow was refreshing his recollection of when they were received by him by the letters themselves, but Mr. Longfellow said he had an absolutely independent recollection.

Gleason Again in Background.

"He may well have that power," said Mr. Delmas. "May not there be some circumstances that fixes the date absolutely independent of any outside assistance?"

"I am holding with you that is true," said Justice Fitzgerald, and the laugh was on Mr. Delmas.

It was noticed soon after Mr. Gleason had started to examine Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Delmas, by reframing and reshaping questions, took the whole thing out of his hands. During the rest of the examination of Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Delmas and Mr. Jerome bumped heads, laughed, and seemed to be enjoying themselves hugely.

Both sides having got from Mr. Longfellow all they wanted about the letter, Mr. Delmas proposed that he would read them in evidence while Longfellow was on the stand, but Mr. Jerome thought that Mrs. Thaw should be recalled and the letters called to her attention before they were read. Turning to Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Jerome said: "You will have to return at the termination of Mrs. Thaw's examination."

Delmas Once Outgeneraled.

Then something seemed to hit Mr. Delmas suddenly. He looked puzzled for a moment and then asked if Mr. Jerome wouldn't cross-examine Mr. Longfellow right then and there.

"I understood counsel wanted to introduce these letters as part of Mrs. Thaw's testimony," said Mr. Jerome, "and that they were to be read in conjunction with her testimony, to make it a consecutive, intelligent narrative. For that reason her examination was suspended and this witness called."

"Well, then, we are through with the witness," said Mr. Delmas.

"When you offered the letters in evidence," said Justice Fitzgerald, "and they are admitted in evidence and get before the jury then the district attorney claims he has a right to cross-examine this witness."

"When that claim is made," said Mr. Delmas, who seemed to be put out, "we will meet it in such a manner as is deemed advisable. For the present all that I have to announce is that I am through with the examination of this witness."

Mrs. Thaw Back on Stand.

In the end Mr. Delmas lost a point, for Justice Fitzgerald said he would allow Mr. Jerome to call Mr. Longfellow for cross examination after Mrs. Thaw's testimony was in. Mr. Longfellow left the stand and Mrs. Thaw was recalled. She read over the first letter which had been handed to Mr. Longfellow. She read it over carefully, and then it was admitted in evidence. Mr. Delmas turned around, faced the jury, and with good effect read the letter, as follows:

"Evelyn left a dozen letters and telegrams from the blackguard with me, also one-half a letter of credit much more distinct. Two hundred dollars was remitted to her account, partly for her to pacify her mother—who received so much more—but mostly to make up to the victim.

"Bedford did give all cash mentioned to Mrs. B. I think, Evelyn we better go to Philadelphia, or somewhere, about Nov. 7. Then I can see her. As you chose, I send her letter to Savoy hotel, too. Telegraph me fully inogram and Marconigram, and finally by telegraph, to quarantine. In any case, I shall have only one piece of luggage, and leave the dock quick. Bedford's man will take the rest."

Always Sorry for Evelyn.

Mr. Delmas—This is a note which, as I shall show the jury, is written upon the heading of the letter. Then this is the letter proper:

"You can see, if I take myself alone it is very simple. However, in that case I should have let Mrs. N. come to America the third Saturday in July, as she wished. Instead, I wish to keep her quietly until the two-odd lie together again, then possibly (not probably) we could have been married without rows. But she told all—and more. She had been warned against that end by the blackguard as untrust worthy and treacherous, and they are friends.

"However, this is useless, for Evelyn and I count together. Her side is not simple at all. When I knew her before (Christmas, 1901), I could have sent her to school. All good enough, but she was misinformed about me and also made one sad mistake in imagining something that did not exist—so she kept on the stage too long.

"Her name was falsely but naturally connected with two others beside the blackguard. Now her health and spirits cannot stand exposure, yet her position would not be worse. Her own conduct has been no exception; she was poisoned at 15¾, also since.

"Dear Longfellow, if they wish to begin any row I am ready, but I prefer reaching New York K. A. H. Shall not inform E. until I perceive that you have Nov. 10 or 11. Going to Philadelphia Nov. 15 or 16. Port Huron for the wedding Nov. 18. After that I wish to return, possibly to be in New York Nov. 24 or 25, when Lady Yarmouth lands. She wishes to see Miss N. there or in Philadelphia. (She knows her.) They are to be in Pittsburg about the middle of December to finish with my family all (who count together) together (I mean united) at a big reception. The more row the better. Possibly Miss N. and I might be married after Lady Y. comes; possibly not till after rows.

"Her Mother—Foolish Woman."

"Her mother don't count much, for I think Evelyn or I can tell the brother enough for him to keep the foolish woman in her tracks. Miss —— is a trickster, etc. She is cheeky, but actually a coward.

"She can be squelched any time, but only by a firm grip, also, I think, as far as she has feelings it is for us. Also I think she takes much for herself from the blackguards (blackmailing them), and is discouraged about me.

"Besides my presents of money, etc., she got $54, then $30, from Bedford by false pretenses, saying it was my orders. Absolutely false. I am not sure it is not larceny. The main point is that despite her bullying, etc., she is morally an abject coward. They have no 'hold' over her. We have several, any of which would 'do' her, with her own connections.

"Another good point. She thought me very 'easy.' Now she thinks the opposite. The matter of being married is most secret. Also, if there should be suit for kidnaping it must not be mentioned. The main point about the suit will be to have one or two staffs of reporters. You secure yours. I know a different sort I shall try to get upon landing.

"I mean no one would dare throw the truth in her face—or in any one's—but now they can throw anything. I can't write this clearly for legal lines, but you may catch the drift. Do not keep this letter even in your private safe. These blackguards have blackguarded each other's reputation so violently that not only will it break their solidarity.

Talks of His Death as Possible.

"Give them no dream that I for an instant could consider marrying. Don't even mention it to E—— unless she is depressed, desperately. She knows more or less. Three months ago I asked her point blank. She thought, but said she would shut me out from, etc. She would give all she has now to have been sent to school by me, then have come out last July, even if I wouldn't marry, far more even if I would. This sounds unnatural to write, but I should most gladly have it so, though I should have been dead by now. Just now they have left here safe. This is most terrible for you. Can you see, if we marry and I died first, my coking coal income goes to my wife—but not her people upon her death.

"All my other property I can dispose of. Could I leave it to my wife for life (especially if I left the largest proportion to her for life in lieu of dower), with reversion to my family or others?

"If I die or am killed she is unlikely to live to 21. Her mother must not benefit vastly. Can her family be cut off? I should provide especially for her brother, but that is aside from the important point of law. When I knew her and her mother deceived me and her, she was the most active, laughing, wholesome, strong, and brave child I ever saw. Now you understand a little. Yours very truly, H. K. T.

"I congratulate you heartily. You have a blessing I never shall have now."

Delmas Twits Jerome in Vain.

Not only the jury but even the persons packed against the wall in the courtroom heard every word of the letter as Mr. Delmas read it. When he got through he turned around, glanced at Mr. Jerome, and said: "The reference," "You have a blessing I never shall have now," it will be admitted is to the fact that Mr. Longfellow was married at that time. Will that be admitted?"

"No," said Mr. Jerome.

"You cannot admit that he was married?" inquired Mr. Delmas with surprise.

"Well, I don't know," said Mr. Jerome, whereat there was a laugh. Then Mr. Delmas took another letter, which Mrs. Thaw identified. Before Mr. Delmas began reading it to the jury, Mr. Jerome whispered to Mrs. Thaw. Mr. Delmas wanted to know what it was all about. It appeared that the writing at the head of the letter was in ink, except the word "important," which was in pencil. Mr. Jerome said that he wanted to find out if the writing in pencil was Thaw's. Mrs. Thaw said it was. Then Mr. Delmas read the letter.

Writes as Man Distraught.

The letter reads as follows:

"There are just three things in this letter. One is, please send me all the returned letters. I'll see if right.

"Nov. 13, 1903.—Dear Longfellow: Please have some one inquire at 202 or 204 (or possibly 206, but I think 204 West Forty-sixth street) if Miss —— is there, or where a letter or telephone message might reach her. I slept seven and one-quarter hours on the train—a record since the day she landed here. My responsibility is gone. Should I manage her again I shall know that he can thank me for any faith, human or divine, she has, and that I can do no more than make the best of it, which exception or conscience was far from bad, except for regrets compared to which every mistake, fault, foolishness, or badness, every loss, every illness, every liberation destroyed, every opportunity missed—all these altogether are but as a split glass of water in a river to the last barrel in a disable ship, found poisoned.

"I did not start to write poetry. I should have stated scientifically that every other misfortune is trivial, is nothing, for it is XX and X whether one or one hundred in relation to X equals OX: X: X: O.

Always Harps on "Scoundrel."

Mr. Delmas asked Mrs. Thaw if the hotel referred to in the letter was the hotel she was then stopping at, and she said it was. Then Mrs. Thaw identified all the other letters, and before reading another Mr. Delmas said it was time for adjournment and he would continue the reading of the letter tomorrow morning. Justice Fitzgerald agreed to the proposition.

It was said that Mrs. Thaw's direct examination will take at least all of tomorrow morning's session. Then her cross examination will be taken up by District Attorney Jerome. It is known that Mr. Jerome and Mr. Garvan have been making a thorough examination of the incidents in the life of Thaw and his wife before they were married. There was a good deal of speculation among the lawyers in the courtroom as to just what manner Mr. Jerome would attempt to combat the story Mrs. Thaw told.

Story Crushes Mrs. Holman.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The startling testimony of her daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, repeated to her over the telephone, was more than Mrs. Charles J. Holman could endure today, and after growing hysterical she collapsed completely. Tonight she is in a state of collapse at her home in Brookline, with physician in attendance.

SHARP REVERSAL OF WALSH PLEAS.

Indictment of Former Bank President Sustained by Federal Judge Anderson.

CURT WORDS FROM COURT

Attorneys for Defense Rebuked for Imputations Against District Prosecutor.

Pleas in abatement made by the attorneys for John R. Walsh, attacking the validity of the Walsh indictment returned by the federal grand jury last month, were set aside yesterday by federal Judge A. B. Anderson and the indictment was sustained. The judge "roasted" the Walsh attorneys severely.

The time for pleading to the indictment was set by Judge Anderson for Feb. 18, but the defendant's attorney gave notice he wished to file a motion to quash. He was ordered to furnish the district attorney with a copy of this motion three days in advance, and the arguments will be heard in the date set for the pleading.

There was no mincing of words in the language with which Judge Anderson disposed of the defendant's plea. He declared the request was most unusual and contrary to law; that the defendant wanted two trials; that the defendant's knowledge of what occurred in the grand jury room smacked of contempt of court on the part of some one; and that the plea was improperly drawn.

Miller Misses Part of It.

Fortunately for John S. Miller, leading counsel for the defense, he had to leave in the afternoon for New York to confer with officials of the Standard Oil, in whose defense he has also been retained, and was not in the courtroom to hear the pitiless scoring his document received. Samuel R. Hamill, assisting Mr. Miller in this case, was present. He excepted to the ruling of the court and was allowed twenty days in which to file his bill of exceptions.

Judge Anderson had a copy of the plea in abatement before him when the case was called earlier in the day, and diligently referred to it during the argument. While Mr. Miller was speaking the judge interrupted several times to call attention to omissions which evidently surprised and apparently settled the discoverer of the "immunity bath."

Rebuke for Attorney Miller.

The first setback received by the defense was when Mr. Miller asked for a delay and stated that on Wednesday the government seemed to desire such action.

"I want you to understand, Mr. Miller, that this court in no way represents the government," said Judge Anderson. "We will go on with the case now."

The judge then insisted that the defendant either be called into court to be present during the argument or the point would be waived if Mr. Miller would consent to have the records appear that Mr. Walsh had been there. This was conceded, and Assistant District Attorney Robert W. Childs read the government's demurrer to the plea in abatement. This, summarized, is as follows:

Plea should have been filed before.

Allegations in plea insufficient.

Material allegations are conclusions of law.

No positive allegation that competent testimony was withheld from the grand jury.

Plea not signed by defendant and improperly verified.

District attorney had right to confer with foreman of grand jury when that body was not in session.

Prosecutor's Course Sustained.

Mr. Miller disclaimed any imputation of corruption on the part of the government attorneys, but asserted they had been remiss in their duties. The question of how the attorney could prove his allegations without revealing the secrets of the grand jury was brought up by Assistant District Attorney James Wilkerson, but Mr. Miller tried to evade this. He thought the district attorney might be called on to testify, but the judge decided otherwise.

In the afternoon Attorney Hamill began his argument and was suggesting that witnesses known to be friends of Walsh should have been allowed to testify.

"What are you trying to get?" demanded Judge Anderson. "Do you want a grand jury to weigh the evidence and try the case?"

"No, your honor," temporized the lawyer.

"No other deduction is possible from your argument. You are complaining because you were not able to try the questions of criminal intent before the grand jury. It is the first time I ever heard of such a thing."

Contempt of Court Intimated.

"I would like to know how the defense came in possession of such facts as it did concerning the action in the grand jury. If it is in my province I would suggest that witnesses who took an oath not to reveal anything, and, after testifying, went forth to tell what they saw and heard are in open and flagrant contempt of court, and should be punished.

"The court must presume the district attorney acted fairly and according to his best judgment. It seems to me the object sought by the defendant is two trials, one in the secrecy of the grand jury room. The law insures the defendant a fair and impartial trial before a jury of his peers, and this he will get. What do you hope for if the court sustains your plea? You did not expect the prosecution would stop, did you?"

Hamill "Doesn't Know."

"I didn't know, your honor," remarked Attorney Hamill.

"Well, I do," resumed the court with some heat. "I'd see to it that it did not stop, and we would have a full exposition of the entire matter. I don't believe the pleas are technically good, but I wouldn't care to risk my refusal of them on that ground alone. It is certain it is not an answer to many of the counts, I don't know how many. The indictment is sustained, and the defendant allowed twenty days in which to file a bill of exceptions."

GIVES $50 FOR KITTEN, BUT SAYS SHE CANNOT PAY RENT.

That Is the Accusation Made Against Mrs. Grace W. Greggs, Who Seeks Discharge in Bankruptcy.

Mrs. Grace W. Greggs, according to the story told to Judge Landis yesterday by Mrs. William C. Flock, who owns the apartment at 1452 Montrose boulevard, in which she lived, paid $50 for a kitten but said she couldn't pay her rent.

Application was made by Mrs. Greggs for a discharge in bankruptcy, but the court sent her case to the referee in bankruptcy.

Similar disposal was made of the application of Eugene Cornelius Wentz, a cook at 181 Madison street, who filed a petition in bankruptcy Sept. 4, 1906, under the name of Cornelius Wentz. Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, 54 Cornell street, told the court that Wentz owed her $800, which he secured by promising to marry her. Wentz said he was married three years ago and that his wife was in the courtroom.

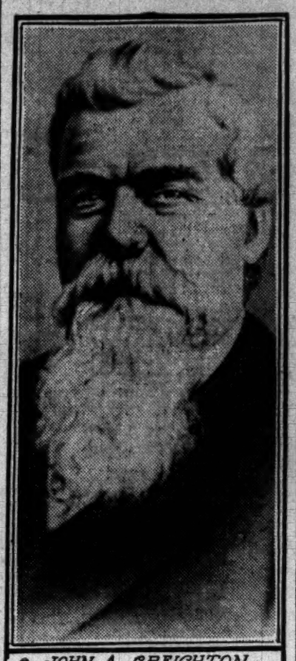
He was not attended regularly by a physician and when members of his family realized his condition Dr. A. L. Michael, North Robey and Le Moyne streets, was called. Creed is believed to have died of paralysis of the heart, but because he had attended the patient but once the physician refused to issue a certificate of death. The coroner was notified.

Count Creighton Is Dead at Omaha.



JOHN A. CREIGHTON

John A. Creighton was made a Roman count by Pope Leo XIII. in recognition of his gifts to Catholic educational and charitable institutions. With his brother, the late Edward Creighton, he gave $1,500,000 for the foundation of Creighton university and $250,000 for St. Joseph's hospital. Count Creighton also founded a medical college, built St. John's church, and endowed the Convent of the Poor Clares, all in Omaha. Altogether his gifts to charity amounted to upward of $3,000,000.

DUNNE'S MEN LOSE AGAIN.

HARRISON FACTION CONTROLS IN THE TWENTY-FIRST WARD.

County Committee Favors James A. Quinn, Although Apparently Effecting a Compromise—Postmaster Busse Returns to Chicago, but Is Still Reticent Regarding His Mayoralty Intentions—Gov. Deneen in City—Other Local Political News.

The Dunne faction of the democratic county central committee again met defeat in a brush with the enemy, the Harrison faction of the committee, yesterday afternoon. The dispute over the control of the delegates from the Twenty-first ward was decided, after an exciting session before the election commissioners, in favor of Committeeman "Jimmie" Quinn, the Harrison representative of the ward.

The differences between Quinn and Edward Diederich, also committeeman from the same ward, which caused so much trouble at the committee's headquarters on Wednesday afternoon, came up for settlement before the election commissioners early in the afternoon. After each man had told of the supposed efforts of his rival to secure control of the ward by "bunking" the other out of the Seventh district, the commissioners said the men should agree upon the matter themselves and then report their findings to the board.

Control Secured by Quinn.

With this was the statement that Quinn appeared to be in the right.

After considerable consultation between Commissioner of Public Works O'Connell and Secretary John P. Tansey of the central committee it was decided that Deiderich should relinquish his claims on the district other than the right to select the polling place. Quinn was given the right to name the judges and clerks.

Although Deiderich and Commissioner O'Connell called this a "compromise," everybody connected with the mixup realized that Quinn was getting away with control of the ward. This ending of the first controversy in the Dunne-Harrison committee is not looked upon by the Dunne men as a good omen.

Busse Back in Chicago.

Postmaster Fred A. Busse returned in the afternoon from Washington, D. C. He will be at his office this morning in the federal building, and it is expected he will be waited upon later by a subcommittee of the business men's committee, which has indorsed him as a candidate for mayor of Chicago.

Mr. Busse said last night he was not ready to make an announcement of his intentions on the mayoralty question.

Gov Deneen spent the day in Chicago and conferred with friends regarding administration matters. He had nothing to say about politics.

Kuns for Alderman Again.

Stanley Kuns's failure to reach congress has not caused him to leave politics in disgust. Apparently he has taken a philosophical view of the situation, and, failing in his highest ambition, he is willing to take what he believes he can get at any time—viz.: the job of representing the Sixteenth ward in the city council.

A select number of the former alderman's constituents met in a hall in Milwaukee avenue during the evening and pledged themselves to make Kuns their candidate for the council. Although Kuns was not present at the meeting they were assured, they said, that he would return if they "showed him that it was his duty."

The annual junket of the Cook County Democratic Marching club will begin at 9 o'clock this morning, when the members of the club will board an Illinois Central train headed for the sunny south, New Orleans being the ultimate goal.

VOTERS' LEAGUE STANDS FIRM.

Tells Attorney Beale Council Committee on Gas, Oil, and Light Is Less Astute than Corporation Counsel.

The Municipal Voters' league still is under the impression that the council committee on gas, oil, and electric light is not always able, alert, and astute in looking after the city's interests—at least, that it is no mental match to the lawyers for the lighting corporations.

It so stated yesterday in its answer to William G. Beale, who complained that the league's criticism of the committee for its approval of the contract ordinances between the city and the Chicago Edison and Commonwealth Electric companies was unfair. An extract from a letter from the league's officers to Mr. Beale says:

"We have no fault to find with your clients or with you as their counsel in trying to make the best and least burdensome bargain possible with the city. This is your absolute right. And we disclaim any intention of criticising or reflecting upon you or your clients in the recent report of the league to which you take exception. Our only complaint is that the representatives of the city did not show themselves in this matter to be as able, as alert, and as astute as the representatives of the companies.

"So far as your companies and yourself are concerned this statement should satisfy you.

Mr. Beale said he was satisfied and had no desire to discuss a dead ordinance further.

DEAD BEAT CURB NEW COURT PLAN

Municipal Judges Frame Bill to Enlarge Powers to Enforce Judgments.

PROPOSE OTHER CHANGES.

Taking of Testimony for Use Before Grand Jury Provided For in Measure Urged.

Protection against "dead beats" has been provided for in an amendment to the Municipal court act, recommended with other alterations and additions to the law by the judges. The revised act will be sent today to the legislature.

The "anti-dead beat" amendment is entitled "supplementary proceedings to enforce the collection of judgments." It is intended to take the place of the strong armed constable of the old justice court days, who was not averse to battering down a door and carrying away a red hot stove after inflicting the proper amount of personal violence on a judgment creditor to inspire in him a nonresisting mood.

One of the Municipal court judges, who is an enthusiastic advocate of the amendment, says that it will increase the credit of Chicago merchants, for it will put an end to bad debts. The law is similar to that of New York, Wisconsin, and Iowa.

Since the departure forever from the field of usefulness of the low browed—often burly—constable the only recourse for the holders of unsatisfied judgments against creditors was to file a creditor's bill in the Superior or Circuit court for the purpose of digging up property.

Operations of the Amendment.

Under the amendment to the Municipal court act, at any time within seven years, in the event that an execution for $100 has not been satisfied, wholly or in part, a judgment creditor suspected of having property may be cited into the Municipal court and examined. Witnesses can be called for both sides in an effort to establish the existence of the property, and failure to answer such summons is punishable by contempt of court.

After the examination, if it appears that the creditor possesses any property, he must turn it over to a bailiff of the Municipal court, by whom it will be sold and the proceeds applied to the execution.

The citation, at the discretion of the court, may require a master in chancery.

Another section provides for preliminary hearings of witnesses whose testimony is desired by grand juries. Provision is made for taking this down in stenographic notes, after which the evidence is transcribed and submitted to the jury, obviating the necessity of the witness appearing before that body. This is designed to save time.

Other Amendments Urged.

Other amendments to the Municipal court act suggested by the judges include the following:

Adding a sixth class of cases, being all proceedings for the prevention of commission of crime; all proceedings for the arrest, commitment, or bail of persons charged with criminal offenses; proceedings pertaining to searches and seizures of personal property.

Providing that the chief justice may call in any judge from an outlying district for assistance in his office.

Reduction of costs in quasi criminal cases from $6 to $3.

Providing a more simple method of appeal. Simplifying the method of transferring a case from the Criminal to the Municipal court.

Providing that the clerk of the court shall make payments of money received on or before the tenth of each month instead of weekly, as under the present system. This is to facilitate the audit by the chief justice.

Chief Justice Olson and the judges have been working on the amendments for several weeks and the proposed measures will be sent today to the Municipal courts committee of both branches of the legislature.

The amendments do not in any way supplant any of the original features of the act.

FORMER SERGEANT, AT INQUIRY, AIDS NEGRO SOLDIERS' CAUSE.

Declares He Thought Brownsville Citizens Were Attacking Barracks—Explains the Broken Gun Rack.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—Five witnesses were examined today in the Brownsville inquiry before the senate committee on military affairs. All were members of company D of the discharged battalion of negro soldiers, except the last on the stand, former Sergeant Luther T. Thornton of company B.

Thornton testified that when aroused by the firing on the night of Aug. 13 he was under the impression that the barracks were being fired upon by people of the town, and that a similar opinion was expressed by some other members of his company. He said the reports of firearms sounded to him like revolvers and shotguns.

He told of the call to arms and of the inspections, of hearing that company C's gunracks had been broken, and of his understanding that these were broken open upon orders of Lieut. Greer of company C, because the noncommissioned officer having the keys could not be found.

Woman Tells of Attack on Town.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Three persons testified before the Penrose court martial today. Mrs. Kate Emma Leahy, J. P. McDonald, and F. A. H. Sanborn each told of the shooting up of the town. Mrs. Leahy said she looked out the window and counted sixteen negro soldiers. They were in blue shirts and wore army hats and trousers. She was unshaken by the cross examination, and adhered to the facts as she gave them.

Mrs. Leahy told of the firing beginning within the barracks, and how the soldiers came down the street past her house, still firing volleys. She said it was half an hour after the first volley before the bugle was sounded. She asserted that the bugle was sounding while negro soldiers were still in the streets running toward the barracks.

President Within Rights—Parker.

New York, Feb. 7.—[Special.]—At the banquet of the Maryland society of New York tonight Judge Alton B. Parker said that, after reading as much as possible on both sides of the Brownsville affair, he had concluded "the president had the power to discharge those negro soldiers." Judge Parker said:

"I have read both sides so far as possible, and after careful consideration of the subject I think the president had the power to discharge those negro soldiers. Whether he ought to have done so, however, I don't know, as I have not the evidence at hand. But if the only way to get rid of the culprits was by the discharge of those men as he did, then I say I think the president was justified.

"And assuming the president had the power to act as he did, I do not believe any body, legislative or judicial, has the right to interfere with his action. I dislike to misjudge any one, but I think that when it is considered that our colored brethren can sway the vote of Ohio, Indiana, and other states this may have something to do with the investigation."

LEGISLATORS TO SEE SCHOOL.

Party of Lawmakers Reaches Champaign to Inspect the University of Illinois.

Champaign Ill., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The members of the state legislature will inspect the University of Illinois today. Lieut. Gov. Lawrence Y. Sherman is in the party of 125. Arriving in Champaign, the party was met by a delegation of Champaign Elks, who will be their hosts during the visit.

Salesgirl Becomes Bride of Rich Man.

Mrs. Charles E. Dunlop.

ROMANCE SECRET IS OUT.

FRIENDS LEARN OF C. E. DUNLOP'S WEDDING AFTER A WEEK.

Groom Is the Son of Prominent Merchant Tailor, Now Deceased, and the Bride a Former Salesgirl in a State Street Store, Where the Young Man First Met Her While He Was on a Shopping Tour Making Purchases for His Sisters.

The marriage of Miss Orma Frazier, 3430 Indiana avenue, to Charles E. Dunlop, 4037 Ellis avenue, son of the late Alexander Dunlop, was news of a surprising nature to the friends and relatives of the bride and groom yesterday upon their return from a week's honeymoon.

They were married the evening of Jan. 29 at the Church of the Messiah, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, by the pastor, the Rev. W. H. Pulsford. So successfully was the secret kept that until the couple's return no one excepting the pastor, two friends who witnessed the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop themselves knew of the marriage.

When Mr. Dunlop presented his bride to his mother at the handsome Dunlop residence in Kenwood she expressed great surprise, but extended a warm greeting. Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop will reside here until spring, when they will go west and spend the summer on the bridegroom's ranch near Bozeman, Mont.

Bride a Former Salesgirl.

The romance that culminated in the secret wedding is of more than commonplace interest, from the fact that Mrs. Dunlop's vocation is thus changed from presiding at a dress goods counter in Charles A. Stevens & Bros.' store in State street to the mistress of one of the handsomest residences in Ellis avenue. The groom is the only son of the wealthy merchant tailor, now dead. Although the family retains an interest in the business at 185 Dearborn street, which is conducted by his uncle, the young man has led the life of a rancher in Montana for the last two years, and declares a preference for the ranch to the city.

The bride came to Chicago four years ago from Concordia, Kas., where her mother, Mrs. L. C. Frazier, resides. The young woman's friends declare that the marriage of the pretty shop girl reiterates the old story that womanly grace and sweetness of disposition often count more than so-called "station" in life.

Smitten While Shopping.

The inception of the romance was across the dress goods counter some three years ago, when Mr. Dunlop went shopping. When he was purchasing some Christmas presents for his two sisters it was the lot of Miss Frazier to wait on him. So well did she perform her task and such good taste did she display that the young man became attracted.

They maintained the friendship most of the time through Uncle Sam's mail service, while Mr. Dunlop was learning how to rope steers and brand cattle.

The groom has two sisters—Mrs. A. C. Soper, 26 Junior terrace, Chicago, and Mrs. G. M. Pennoyer of Kenosha.

Francis Holton and Maud McJames, Chicago young people, eloped to Waukegan and were married there by the Rev. Thomas Higginbotham. The couple were youthful in appearance, but gave their ages as 21 and 18. It is surmised that something came up to change plans for a more elaborate wedding, as the bride took along a carefully made wedding dress, which she put on at the minister's residence before the ceremony, saying she did not want to be married in her ordinary clothes. They said they would reside at 38 Wieland court, Chicago.

REUNION NOT DUE TO DREAM.

William Dawson, Separated from Sisters When 3 Years of Age, Finds Them After Long Search.

Fairfield, Ill., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—A reunion of William Dawson with his three sisters, whom he had not seen for twenty years, was due to the efforts of the sisters to find a brother who, having been only 3 years old when separated from them, did not know of their existence. He learned of them two and a half years ago when his sisters traced him through an orphan asylum in which he had been placed and ascertained that he had enlisted in the army and was in Alaska. They wrote to him through the war department, and when his term of enlistment expired recently he came at once to Fairfield, where he met his sister Dora, and went from here to Carmi, where he met his other sisters, Mrs. Cora Gross and Mrs. Nora Collins. The report that Dawson had been found through a dream was erroneous.

MAY SELL STEAMSHIP LINE.

New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad Offered $20,000,000 for Its Boats by C. W. Morse.

New York, Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford will hold a meeting tomorrow afternoon to consider an offer made by Charles W. Morse for the New England Navigation company and the Maine Steamship company. The offer is understood to be $20,000,000.

Mr. Morse's offer was made subsequently to the investigation by the interstate commerce commission into the relations between railroad companies and steamship lines.

Some of Morse's associates talked a great deal about the probability of the government forcing railroads to dispose of such steamship lines as might under other ownership be competitive.

Cars Run Wild; Twenty Hurt.

Steubenville, O., Feb. 7.—A Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad work train engine, running at high speed, separated from a car containing twenty laborers at Mingo Junction, O., today. The engine stopped short and the car, crashing into it, was thrown over an embankment. Nearly all the men were injured.

IROQUOIS CASES DELAY CENSURED

Law School Professor Assails Alleged Inefficiency of the Judicial System.

SAYS IT SHOCKS WORLD.

Suggest Remedies for Securing Speedy Administration of Justice in Court.

"A delay of three years in an ordinary personal injury action may be a grave injustice to a single individual or family, but an equal delay in bringing to trial the large number of cases, civil and criminal, arising from a theater fire which caused the loss of nearly 600 lives and shocked the civilized world sows broadcast the seed of contempt for law and gives notice to the world of the inefficiency of our judicial system."

In these words Prof. Frederic C. Woodward of the Northwestern university law school, writing in the February number of the Illinois Law Review, which was issued yesterday, sums up what may be termed the legal lesson of the Iroquois fire.

Gives Summary of Proceedings.

The body of Prof. Woodward's article is a detailed summary of the criminal proceedings which began with the arrest of fourteen employés of the Iroquois theater the day after the fire and have dragged on through more than three years with practically no results, but from this the writer passes to a consideration of the causes of this delay and to the suggestion of remedies in the legal procedure of the state which he believes the Iroquois cases prove to be necessary.

Prof. Woodward's article is followed by a paper by Attorney George A. Follansbee, in which Mr. Follansbee criticizes the Law Review for an editorial denunciation of the court delays in the cases, published in the January number, and maintains that the slowness of procedure is due, not to defects in the procedure of the courts, but to failure on the part of the various plaintiffs to prosecute their cases properly.

Causes of Delay Mentioned.

"In studying the record of the criminal prosecutions," says Prof. Woodward, "it is to be noted that the indictment against Will J. Davis was selected by the state's attorney as the first case to be brought to trial. This may be accepted as the cause and justification of the postponement of the other cases. The history of the Davis case shows that the chief causes of delay have been as follows:

"1. Lack of dispatch in the conduct of the prosecution.

"2. The Fabian policy of counsel for the defendant in postponing motions to quash indictments and for change of venue and in securing postponements from the court.

"3. The tardiness of judges in ruling upon motions.

"As for the civil actions, undoubtedly the interests of the defendants have been skillfully guarded. There have been pleas of not guilty and pleas in abatement, general demurrers, and special demurrers in large number.

Cases Dropped by Lawyers.

"The success of special demurrers is one of the most striking features of the litigation. Instances have been found in which five or six successive declarations have been found defective, and it is estimated that in the cases now pending the average number of declarations drawn has not been less than three.

"Only a small proportion of the cases that were recommended are still pending. So far as can be learned, not a single case is actually at issue, and the outlook is that none will be tried for some time. The practical abandonment of considerably more than one-half of the cases indicates the discouragement of counsel for plaintiffs. The lawyer whose compensation is contingent upon success, as is probably true in nearly all of these cases, is likely to conclude, unless he has a sufficient number of cases to repay him for a long and bitter struggle, that the game is not worth the candle."

Remedies Are Suggested.

In concluding his article, Prof. Woodward suggests "remedies" as follows:

"1. Some method should be devised by which judges in criminal cases may be forced to decide within a reasonable time questions submitted to them. It is altogether probable that the Davis case could have been brought to trial nearly a year ago but for judicial procrastination.

"2. The state's attorney should be given a larger staff of assistants.

"3. When a civil case is reached on the calendar, and no substantial reason for further delay in going to trial appears, it should either be tried or dismissed.

"4. When precisely the same question arises in a number of cases pending at the same time, either all of the cases should be assigned to the same judge, or the decision of the judge first passing upon the question should be binding upon all of the other judges of the court.

"5. The simplification of our pleading and practice is a crying need. The abandonment of many of these cases appears to be due in large measure to discouragement resulting from inability to cope with the present complicated and antiquated system.

"6. Relief from the present congestion of the calendars of the Circuit and Superior courts is of the utmost importance."

Prof. Woodward was assisted in preparing his article by Frank O. Smith, a member of the class of 1907 in the law school.

WOMAN'S MYSTERIOUS DEATH CAUSE OF FURTHER INQUIRY.

Supposed Poisoning of Mrs. Ida Binge of New York Results in Questioning of Seven More Persons.

New York, Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The investigation that the district attorney's office is making into the case of Mrs. Ida Binge, the wealthy widow who died on Wednesday morning at her home, 68 East Eighth-th street, was continued with greater vigor today. Assistant District Attorney Smyth had before him at his office seven persons, all living in the house up to the time that Mrs. Binge died.

The first witness to be examined was Leopold Wallau, who married Mrs. Binge's only child, Ida. Mr. Wallau is a manufacturer of bronze powders and paint materials. After Mr. Wallau had been questioned at length his 21 year old son, Alexander, was questioned.

Later on Mr. Smyth had before him an elderly negro man servant of the Binge household. A young white boy, said to have been employed in the house, and three women were examined. Two of the women are servants in the house. The third is said to have been a nurse that was employed only a few days prior to the death of Mrs. Binge and after one of the nurses that had been there some time had been dismissed.

Neither Mr. Wallau nor his son would make any statement when they came out of Mr. Smyth's office. It was learned that the two nurses who had been attending Mrs. Binge for some weeks were Miss Elizabeth Devine and a Miss Cleveland. One of these young women supplied the district attorney with the information that prompted the present investigation. According to one story one of these nurses drank some champagne that was being given to Mrs. Binge and was taken suddenly and violently ill.

Unsigned Bank Notes Stolen.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 7.—Unsigned bank notes to the amount of $1,250, consigned by the controller of the currency at Washington to the Wilmerding National bank at Wilmerding, a suburb, were stolen today from a drawer in the baggage room of the Pennsylvania railroad at Wilmerding.

INCOME TAX FOR FRANCE.

WHOLE FINANCE SYSTEM OVERTURNED BY PROPOSED LAW.

Government's Measure to Abolish the Old Door, Window, Poll, and Other Forms of Direct Tribute—Burden of Expense Thrown Upon Rich—Socialists Are Wild with Joy, but Moderate Republicans Will Fight the Plan.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—The government's new income tax scheme, introduced in the chamber of deputies today, created a great sensation when it was made public this afternoon after the closing of the bourse.

If enacted into a law it will constitute a complete readjustment of France's fiscal system. The old door, window, poll, and other direct taxes are to be replaced by a system based upon incomes. Day laborers are practically exempted. The tax upon incomes above $1,000 a year is made progressive up to 4 per cent of the total.

Even government rentes, excepting those held abroad, only nominally escape, the coupons themselves being exempt, but the revenue therefrom being taxed when the total income of the holder exceeds the minimum laid down. French savings are largely invested in rentes.

The burdens placed upon foreign securities, both private and governmental, constitute a particularly heavy blow to Russian securities, of which it is estimated that from 8 to 10 milliards ($1,600,000,000 to $2,000,000,000) are held in France.

Socialists Wild with Joy.

This new income tax measure is one of the radical reforms to which the Clemenceau ministry committed itself upon assuming office. It was submitted for the approval of M. Jaures, the socialist leader, before introduction in the chamber, and, while it is received with unbounded joy by the socialistic groups as a proper shifting of the burden of taxation to the shoulders of the idle rich, it is sure to encounter intense opposition from the more moderate republicans, as well as from the conservative parties.

How the nation at large will receive the measure remains to be seen, and, while it is resented by the rich, it seems likely to prove popular with the masses.

Affects Only a Few.

Only half a million families are affected by the higher progressive income measure, which Finance Minister Caillaux estimates will produce $24,000,000 a year. The other 9,300,000 taxable families of France are composed of "petite rentiers" (small fund holders), who live upon modest savings that produce less than $1,000 a year, and which are liable to the lower rate of taxation.

UNITED STATES AND MEXICO MAY UNITE TO STOP WAR.

If Nicaragua and Honduras Cannot Arbitrate Dispute Big Republics Will Intervene Under Treaty.

City of Mexico, Feb. 7.—It is believed the United States and Mexico will intervene to prevent war between Nicaragua and Honduras. Such a war is threatened, and if begun it might involve the other Central American republics.

Under the agreement signed July 20, 1906, by all of the republics of Central America upon the conclusion of the recent war between Gautemala and San Salvador, the United States and Mexico have the right to intervene in case of war between any of those countries.

Later a second treaty was signed at Corinto, Nicaragua, by the terms of which all the Central American republics themselves refer all disputes to an arbitration bureau. For this reason there will be no actual intervention until the decision of the arbitration board is given.

The dispute between Nicaragua and Honduras began many years ago in a concession granted to an American of Pittsburg named Dietrich, involving a large tract of land. This concession is lapped over on to Honduran territory, and Honduras prevented the concession from operating. This brought about a boundary dispute, which finally was submitted to King Alfonso for arbitration. Nicaragua claimed King Alfonso favored Honduras, and since that time the former country never has been satisfied.

Recently there sprung up the rebellion against President Bonilla of Honduras, near the Nicaraguan border. This movement, it was claimed in dispatches emanating from Honduran sources, was fomented and engineered from Nicaragua.

POPE REJECTS FRENCH TERMS.

Vatican Refuses to Accept Either Form of Church Leases Submitted for Its Approval.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

ROME, Feb. 7.—The vatican has rejected both forms of church leases submitted by M. Briand, the French minister of public education.

The first form is rejected because it permits mayors of French towns to refuse to renew leases of churches on a change of parish priests. The other form is rejected because it already had been condemned by the pope.

The vatican is now convinced that France is determined to continue the church war.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

TOKIO—Troops have been dispatched to the copper mines in the Ashio district, where the miners made an attack upon the property, using dynamite. Fifteen rioters were burned to death in a storehouse which they had plundered for provisions and liquor, and which they set on fire while in a drunken condition.

BUCHAREST, Roumania—Fifteen wood cutters were overwhelmed by an avalanche yesterday in the Muscel district of the Transylvania mountains. All the men were dead when they were dug out of the snow.

ACCUSE HOSPITAL OFFICIALS.

Charge Made That Injured Cab Driver Was Visited by Traction Company Claim Agent While Unconscious.

Charges against the officials of the Emergency hospital made to Mayor Dunne yesterday by William A. Manning, George M. Phillips, W. T. Wood, and Henry Saylor were turned over to Chief Collins for investigation. In a letter to the mayor the men assert that Matthew Gary, a cabdriver, was struck by a Wabash avenue car the night of Jan. 22, and taken to the Emergency hospital, and that within two days, while Gary was not in full possession of his senses, he was visited by a claim agent of the traction company, who effected a settlement for $50 for personal injuries.

Mother Succumbs to Grief for Daughter and Pastor Expires After Visit to Former.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Grief over the death of her daughter less than a month ago hastened the death last night of Mrs. Elizabeth Corbett, of Corsica, Pa., a relative of the Rev. Dr. Hunter Corbett, a missionary. The excitement attending the visit to her of her pastor, the Rev. F. H. Britt of the Corsica Presbyterian church, yesterday afternoon, caused the death of the minister a few minutes after he returned home.

HEALTH WORK O.K. ALDERMEN 'BORED'

Council Committee Approves Whalen's Method of Combating Disease in City.

WITNESS THEN BOBS UP.

Ex-Employe Soesman Receives Arctic Welcome from Hoffman and Colleagues.

The council committee on health yesterday afternoon—Ald. Peter L. Hoffman in the chair—adopted a "long and dignified" report upon the efficiency of the health department, and recommended that the department be given more money.

But all that was merely preliminary to what followed, an annoying confab with Charles E. Soesman, a discharged employé of the department, who approached the committee loaded down with notes and documents, and who received an arctic welcome.

Ald. Roberts had added a little variety to the session by declaring the milk inspection was a farce, after he learned that one inspector had to cover seventy-two railroad platforms. Then the report exonerating Dr. Whalen from all blame was adopted, and Chairman Hoffman removed his feet from the mayor's desk, yawned, and said the committee might as well go home, and then—a voice from the back of the chamber spoke up:

"Mr. Soesman is here, and would like to testify."

Lawyer Speaks, Then "Fades."

It was Mr. Soesman's attorney who spoke and quickly withdrew. Soesman, who lives at 830 North Spaulding avenue, remained.

Smoking a black cigar, the unwelcome witness strolled toward the desk. All eyes were on him. The aldermen sank back into their seats.

"If he has any facts let him go to the mayor," said Ald. Schermann.

"Very proper," said the chair.

"I move he be heard," said Ald. Roberts.

"I heard he was tried before the civil service commission," spoke up Ald. Bradley.

"From what I hear his information is not from good sources," said Ald. Hoffman.

Why Soesman Was Discharged.

It appears that the following were the two charges, on which Soesman had been discharged by the civil service commission. These were:

That in February, 1903, he solicited and received from Joseph Weis, James N. Turner, and W. S. A. Bring, milk inspectors, the sum of $2 each, for the purpose of getting their salaries raised through his influence with the aldermen.

That he received $100 on Feb. 27, 1904, from the Chicago Milk Dealers' association for writing an article in the interest of the milk dealers.

Ald. Hoffman remarked to Soesman: "What have you got, anyway?"

"I have no intention of assailing any one's character," said Soesman. "I want to tell things of interest to the public health."

"Well, I think he ought to file his charges. We have no jurisdiction," said Ald. Bradley.

"Gentlemen," said Soesman, "I have to refer you to the council resolution ordering this investigation. It says that this committee shall take up an investigation of the sources of this epidemic, its origin, giving the public information as to what is being done in the health department to stop it. Now the question is what is the relation of the milk inspection to this epidemic?"

"Are you a physician?" asked Ald. Bradley.

Is Told to "Hire a Hall."

"O, let him alone," interrupted Ald. Sitts. "What are we afraid of, anyway?"

"The health commissioner says that scarlet fever is not a milk disease," said Soesman. "I say it is. He says it is not to protect the big milk dealers. Now——"

"When did he say it was not a milk disease?" asked Ald. Bradley. "He did not."

"In 1901 there was a scarlet fever epidemic in Rogers Park," went on Soesman. "At that time——"

"Tell us something about 1907," broke in the chairman. "We don't want an all-night session here. Go and hire a hall somewhere."

"You are quoted as saying that you had doctored the health department reports when you were in the office," said Ald. Conlon. "If that is so, let us have it."

"Something Fresh" Asked For.

"I want to say first," said Soesman, "that the thing which I advocated when I was discharged for pernicious activity was recommended the other day by Dr. Webster. Now, I want to read a letter I wrote at that time. It was at the beginning of Dr. Whalen's term. It is a public letter which he never gave out. It shows that the small milk dealers were jobbed by the fact that the railroads were not required to ice milk. The department never would push that ordinance."

"What are we listening to all this trash for?" asked Ald. Schermann.

"Give us something fresh. This is old dope," said Ald. Hoffman.

"Have you anything else?" asked Ald. Bradley.

"It is a question," said Soesman, "whether you want me to testify that I was forced into making false reports."

"Give it to us," said Hoffman and Bradley, "but hurry."

Explanation by Dr. Blehn.

"First, I have a letter here," said Soesman, "that Dr. Blehn of the department, the man who has testified today that the department is all right, wrote in 1905."

"Is that your letter, Dr. Blehn?" asked the chairman, handing the paper over to the city laboratory expert, who was an interested witness of the scene.

Dr. Blehn looked it over and said it was. "Read it," said the chairman. Soesman read:

"Records only entered once a year. Then they are incomplete. There is no record of the offenses of the year or of the disposition of suits against milk dealers. Can tell nothing about samples. No record of sanitary inspection. Present system inadequate. No record of suit—by whom started."

"Let Dr. Blehn speak," ordered the chairman.

"We had but one clerk then," said Dr. Blehn, in defense. "I was referring to the card system, which was incomplete. Records are kept on other sheets. It is better now."

"Do you remember, Dr. Blehn," asked Soesman, "your coming to me one day with this letter and asking me to frame a protest to the commissioner. Did you not tell me that you did not like the way the department was run—that it was farcical—but you were powerless?"

"I do not remember it," said Dr. Blehn.

Says Malt Is Fed to Cows.

"Anything else?" asked Hoffman.

"Yes," said Soesman, "I can tell you of a dozen places where malt is fed to cows. One of the city inspectors gets his milk from a place of that sort not four blocks from his house. Complaint has been made, but there has been no prosecution. I know of twenty-five other places. I saw four wagon loads of vinegar slop carried to dairies today. I know of thirty corporations that ran wagons for a year without licenses."

"Give us some facts; cut out this dope," said Ald. Hoffman.

"Would the committee have any interest in a letter written by the city chemist, Hugo Jone?" asked Soesman.

"No," said most of the committee.

"It charges," said Soesman, "that there are men now on the payroll who have altered records so that innocent milk dealers were prosecuted."

"Never mind that," said Hoffman.

"Jone also told me," said Soesman, "that, as the price of his being restored to duty, he was forced to write a letter to the commissioner of health not retracting these charges of altering records but agreeing to suppress them."

"How long ago was that?" said Hoffman.

"In 1905," said Soesman.

"Give us something new," said the chairman, wearily.

Rebuked by City's Lawyer.

At this juncture Assistant Corporation Counsel Hornstein appeared on the scene, and Commissioner Whalen hovered near the door. The alarm had gone through the hall that there was some "scandal" breaking out.

"Do you know of any violations of the ordinance that the health department has not looked after within the last three months?" asked Mr. Hornstein, severely.

"I have no official data. I judge from the past," said the witness.

"If you have the health of the city at heart you should report these things; not come here to wash your dirty linen," said Mr. Hornstein.

"It would do no good," said Soesman. "The commissioners of health do not want to prosecute violations."

"How did you doctor reports?" asked Ald. Roberts.

"Does a statement of revenues from the department that was falsified interest the committee?"

The committee allowed it might.

"Well, I wrote the reports for four years, and they show a total of fines collected of $8,008 for 1905."

"And you mean to tell us that was less than was collected," broke in Hornstein.

"Yes," said the witness.

"Well, that was the fault of the law department," said the lawyer. "Now we want facts here against Whalen."

"The trouble is that this committee does not want these facts," said Soesman.

"Move that this gentleman write out his story and submit it at our next meeting," said Ald. Roberts.

The aldermen agreed to this program with alacrity. They had escaped from the hall almost before the motion was carried.

Chemist Makes a Complaint.

The only witness before the committee was Dr. A. Frank Philipson, 409 Rector building, a chemist expert "who made the health department of Copenhagen." He argued d for a greater harmony between the state and city health boards, and told of a place at Twelfth and State streets where "second handed cream" was sold to the poor. He told of milk dealers who kept their cans in their sleeping rooms.

Then Ald. Conlon displayed a thirst for information on milk inspection. He was told that there are 4,000 firms covered by 6 inspectors, and 72 railroad platforms covered by 1 man.

"The milk inspection is a farce," said Ald. Roberts.

"Well, that feature is covered in our report," said the chairman.

An amendment to the code offered by Ald. Moynihan was adopted. It provides that where there is violation of the ordinances, and danger from disease is found, the commissioner of health shall have the power to close the dairies until the danger is past.

Whalen's Methods Commended.

The report of exoneration brought in by Ald. Bradley's subcommittee and adopted declared that the health department had every method approved of by science to check the spread of contagious diseases.

It declared the needs of the city had outgrown the department, and recommended that provision be made for a contagious disease hospital and also that the regular force of medical inspectors be increased from twelve to twenty-five.

It also suggested that the health commissioner devote his entire time to the work of his office and that his salary be increased. It declared that the office should be independent of politics.

Two salient feature of the report were that the appropriation for the department is wholly inadequate for the immense population of the city and that the medical inspection of schools instituted by the board of education had been abandoned some years ago and no provision made either by the school board or the city to reëstablish the inspection.

The final recommendation was that the city should establish a permanent contagious disease hospital with from 200 to 300 beds.

In concluding, the report said it was the opinion of the subcommittee and the medical experts called in that the present epidemic is now abating and that the most dangerous period has been passed. The doctors assisting in preparing the report were Dr. C. L. Mix, Dr. W. T. Belfield, and Dr. A. C. Cotton.

Epidemic Practically Ended.

A decrease was recorded in the number of contagious diseases reported during the day. The inspectors found 118 cases of contagion. The contagious diseases are confined to the southwest side. Dr. Spalding said most of the new cases were of a mild form and the epidemic had passed.

Dr. Welcker Tells of Voucher.

A story was printed in the afternoon regarding Dr. Whalen and Dr. H. Welcker of Milwaukee. Dr. Welcker furnishes vaccine to the city. The health commissioner's name was on the back of a city pay warrant made out to Dr. Welcker. Dr. Whalen said he had indorsed the pay warrant as an accommodation to Dr. Welcker.

Dr. Welcker was reached in Milwaukee in the evening and said:

"I have been doing business with the city of Chicago for several years. A year ago, as near as I can remember, I had a $500 voucher cashed in Chicago. I went to the health department to get the money and was sent to the controller's office. It was hard for me to be identified, so at my request Dr. Whalen accompanied me and indorsed the voucher. I was in a hurry to leave the city and Dr. Whalen took me to his bank and secured the money for me. That was all there was to it."

PROBES FOR BIG SWINDLE.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY TAKES UP THE T. H. DANIELS CASE.

Principal Defendant, Also Known as Cameron, Accused of Conspiring with Eight Other Men to Defraud Small Concerns by Means of Fake Underwriting Scheme—Several Chicago Lawyers Involved in Charges—Numerous Witnesses to Testify.

Evidence concerning the swindling operations alleged to have been carried on by a syndicate headed by Thomas H. Daniels, alias Cameron, was presented to the federal grand jury here yesterday. There are nine men against whom indictments are sought, and the government agents intimate that Daniels, alias Cameron, will turn state's evidence.

Nearly twenty-five witnesses were examined and there are others expected to testify. The other men against whom the government is seeking true bills are:

Frederick Kingsland, lawyer, 131 La Salle street.

G. W. Dingman, 97 Clark street.

J. C. Kinney, 97 Clark street.

George John Munro, lawyer, Joliet.

I. L. H. Holton, 97 Clark street.

John Stirlen, Chicago.

Frederick C. Struckmeyer, lawyer, 140 Dearborn street.

Charles Endicott Brown, 140 Dearborn street.

The operations of Daniels and the first four of the other named men under investigation were confined to Milwaukee and Post Office Inspector Ralph Bird is credited with having unearthed the case against them. An effort was made to have them indicted in Milwaukee before a federal grand jury, recently in session there, but a question of jurisdiction arose and it was discovered the alleged conspiracy was formed in Chicago and it was held better to seek the indictment here.

Small Concerns the Victims.

All these men, it is alleged, worked in harmony, although not all of them were in on every deal. The method of operation was to organize a company for underwriting stock and then advertise. Some small concern wishing to increase its capital stock would be caught by these advertisements and send an agent here to investigate. He would be told that the underwriting company represented capitalists who would be glad to take stock they had underwritten provided the affairs of the company were as represented.

A fee was charged for having the stock issued, another for underwriting, and finally a sum was exacted for the expenses of an expert who should examine the plant of the company to be underwritten. This expert was one of the alleged conspirators and he always found some flaw which prevented the alleged capitalists from investing the money. The underwriting was of no value save to persons who could be hypnotized into buying stock on it and to the underwriters.

Many Witnesses Summoned.

Testimony before the grand jury was given by C. L. Arzeno, Cincinnati, O., with the Walnut Hills Coal and Mining company, and by J. C. Tate, Des Moines, Ia., with the Des-Ouray Consolidated Mine and Mining company. Others summoned to testify are:

ANDERSON, J. D., St. Marys, O., with the St. Marys Machine company.

ARBOGAST, E. W., Chicago, of the Arbogast Motor company.

BARND, H. A., Springfield, O., of the Tropical Fruit and Decorative Plant company.

BUGG, THOMAS C., Bardwell, Ky., of the Southern Land and Lumber company.

BUYERS, HARVEY L., Lucas, Ia., of the Railway Steel Tie company.

CANVIN, LEWIS, Hiteman, Ia., of the Railway Steel Tie company.

GLENN, JOHN S., Cincinnati, O., with the Ohio Valley Boiler and Machine company.

HOOPER, J. H., Spokane, Wash., of the Federal Developing company and the Diamond Sheep Mining company.

LINDEMAN, CHARLES, Milwaukee, Wis., formerly with J. P. Lindeman & Sons, incorporated, who incorporated the business under the name of Charles Lindeman.

LONG, E. L., Galveston, Tex., of the Texas Sand Lime Brick company.

MASSIE, JOHN G., Belleville, Ill., of the Inter-Mountain Gold Mining and Milling company.

RICHARDS, W. M., Indianapolis, Ind., of the H. Porkorney & Richards Auto Gas Engine company.

SANDHOLM, JOHN A., Des Moines, Ia., of the Sandholm Mining company.

TART, J. C., Edwardsville, Ill., with the Old Caney company.

WALL, J. ELMER, Racine, Wis., with the Brune stock farm.

WILSON, LUTHER, Broadwell, Ky., of the Southern Land and Lumber company.

WINTHROP, C. E. R., Wichita, Kas., of the Oswego Seed and Grain company.

Each of these men is expected to testify that he was defrauded through his efforts to have incorporated the company with which he is connected. The sums alleged to have been obtained vary from $200 to over $1,000.

PACIFIC GARDEN MISSION CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY.

First Ward Gathering Observes Conversion, Twenty-seven Years Ago, of Harry Monroe, Leader in Services.

The First ward gathered itself together at the Pacific Garden mission last evening, invited in a few representatives from other sections of the city, and celebrated the twenty-seventh anniversary of the conversion of Harry Monroe, who leads the meetings at the mission, and is probably the most unique evangelistic worker in the middle west.

Those who have attended the services year after year in the historic little room at the corner of Van Buren street and Plymouth court know that this anniversary is the one night in all the year when personal affection for the bluff, hearty "father in God" is unrestrained at the mission.

In characteristic fashion the men and women, some of them seemingly the dregs of humanity, others showing that their clothes as well as their hearts had been "converted," jumped to their feet, one after another, and told what "Harry" had done for them.

"I haven't a dearer friend in the world than that boy," said one gray haired old man. "I've never said that before, but he knows it."

"They let me out of the 'pen' down to Joliet a while ago!" cried a young fellow. "It's a hard thing to stand up here and tell it, but it's so. When I came back here there wasn't a copper at central station that didn't know me. But, glory to God, Jesus is wit' me now and I ain't afeard of any man, on the streets or off! And there's the man that did it!"

TO PROBE DESK "TRUST" TODAY

Government Officials Ready to Present Evidence of Alleged Furniture Combine to Federal Grand Jury.

United States District Attorney Sims is prepared to present the evidence secured by the government against the so-called furniture trust to the federal grand jury today. Practically all of the witnesses for whom subpoenas were issued have arrived and as many of them came from other parts of the country the delaying of the investigation means a big expense to the government.

More than ordinary secrecy is maintained as to the identity of witnesses. It is known that many of those to testify live in Racine, Grand Rapids, and Buffalo, but these for the most part are employés of the American Seating company. Local men in the employ of the same company have also been subpœnaed, as have the employés of the A. H. Andrews & Co. and the Sherwood company.

One of the American Seating company's employés who is to testify is Edward L. Milton, an expert fitter, and who superintends that part of the work. Mr. Milton's duties take him to the various factories of the American Seating company, and by him the government expects to prove the extent and number of this company's plants.

A matter which it was hired would be investigated was the passage of a law by the Illinois legislature which prohibited the use of school desks in the schools of this state which had been made in the penitentiary factory. This was ostensibly passed to protect the American workmen from competition with "cheap convict labor," but the government wants to know if there were not some ulterior motive.

A story which gained some circulation was that the American Seating company controlled the output of the Indiana penitentiary plant.

TAKEN AS BLACK HAND GANG.

Five Italians Arrested—Four Identified by Man Who Has Been Refugeeing in Police Station.

Dominick Faleo, 32 years old, One Hundred and Sixth street and Torrence avenue, South Chicago, who has been sleeping at the Hegewisch police station since Feb. 5 for fear that he would fall into the hands of members of an alleged "Black Hand society," who had threatened his life, yesterday afternoon identified four Italians as the ones who had attempted to assault him after sending him a threatening letter. A fifth man seen with those identified by Faleo was also arrested.

Faleo says he was forced to leave his home in Noggio, Italy, because of threats made against him by the "Black Hand society."

The men arrested are Ronzzolo Curro, Tomas Fardaty, Angelo Dominick, Vennings De Parquak, and D. Arnico. They will be arraigned today before Municipal Judge Goodnow.

MAY TAX PARKS FOR WATER.

Council Committee Begins Steps to Secure Passage of Ordinance to Compel Installation of Meters.

Action to compel the city parks to pay for water was begun by the water committee at its meeting yesterday. Commissioner of Public Works O'Connell reported that the total amount of water used by the parks in 1906 was 1,854,575,000 gallons, and that its value to the city would be $129,840. A subcommittee was appointed to confer with the corporation counsel and draft an ordinance compelling the park boards to install meters and pay for all water used.

$700 FOR TRACTION VIEW.

One of Latest Charges Is That for Opinion Upholding Dunne in Car Law Fight.

Mayor Dunne's "contingent fund," which amounted last year to almost $80,000, represents, as it appeared from an investigation yesterday, the overflow from the extravagant administration of the corporation counsel's office.

The fund, much larger, it is asserted, than that of any previous administration in Chicago, went largely to indulge the cherished and fragile fancies of the mayor along the lines of I. M. O.

Perhaps the most notable example of this appears in the last voucher endorsed by the mayor. It was for $700 expended for what thoughtless persons, not interested especially in I. M. O. or the mayor's personal political ambitions, would call "purely campaign purposes."

This was for the opinion furnished by two lawyers the latter part of January, dressing up in legal language the objections that Mayor Dunne had interposed to the traction ordinances. These were the same ordinances that had been drafted by Mayor Dunne's own appointed committee and his special traction counsel and with his approval at every stage of the negotiations until Deputy Assistant Mayor Margaret Haley and David K. Tone told him they wouldn't do at all.

Money Paid to See Tom Johnson.

There are other items in the contingent fund that indicate how the taxpayers put up the money for jaunts by the mayor to Cleveland, O., where he went to consult Assistant Mayor Tom Johnson regarding I. M. O., parallel lines, acquiring the traction properties by condemnation proceedings, and similar interesting topics.

A large share of the expenditures went for appraisal of the traction properties by the Arnold company and M. E. Cooley and A. B. Dupont, who, with Bion J. Arnold, comprised the commission that had general direction of the valuation of the properties.

Of the $700 that went for the opinion on the traction ordinances, which the mayor, it is assumed, will employ chiefly as a campaign document in the event he secures the democratic nomination, $500 was paid to former Justice Benjamin D. Magruder and $200 to Clarence N. Goodwin.

$700 for What He Wanted.

The opinion presented by the two attorneys, after having been outlined by the mayor, was in opposition, naturally, to the traction ordinances and to the legal advice of Special Traction Counsel Walter L. Fisher. It practically embodied the objections of the mayor that had been set forth more briefly in one of his messages to the people.

When Mayor Dunne gave out this opinion two weeks ago he was asked whether he or the city would pay for it. He would not state definitely, but now it is evident that the mayor did not feel justified in going down into his own pocket to pay for an opinion that afterwards could be used to advantage in his mayoralty campaign.

$1,325 to Realty Expert.

There are other items in the list that show how Joseph Donnersberger was employed as a real estate expert in the appraisal of the traction properties. Mr. Donnersberger was paid $925 for his services as a real estate appraiser of land owned by the Chicago City railway company and the North Chicago and West Chicago Street railways. For other services in the valuation of street car properties Mr. Donnersberger was paid $500.

Mayor Dunne and one other who accompanied him to Cleveland, O., presented a bill for railroad fare amounting to $43. There is no item for the hiring of an automobile to take Deputy Mayor Johnson around the city when he came to Chicago. The mayor also presented a bill for his trip from Sandusky, O., to Detroit, Mich., for a conference with A. B. Dupont on traction matters, after having talked the thing over with Deputy Mayor Johnson.

Price of Meals Varies.

It does not appear specifically that the mayor charged for his meals on these little excursions to the cities of I. M. O., but his friend, A. M. Lynch, superintendent of the bridewell, had no such compunctions, for when Mr. Lynch went to Albany in September, 1906, to attend a meeting of the National Prison association, he charged up all his meals at the rate of $3 a day. His bill was $99.50.

Not so with John E. Owens, a legal friend of the mayor's, who represented the mayor at a conference in New York relating to the primary election laws. Mr. Owens' expenses amounted to $91.45, and for meals he spent but 85 cents each, which is not extravagant in New York.

The expenses of the mayor and Walter L. Fisher during a trip to Washington and New York on tunnel lowering matters amounted to $105.

The vouchers are not separated in the department of Controller McGann, but in the annual report of expenditures the contingent fund is divided into two parts. One portion, devoted entirely to street railway matters, amounts to $34,000, and the other amounts to $22,039.

$6,500 Spent in Futile Suits.

From the vouchers for general expenses one of the largest items is that of $6,500, for court costs in expensive and fruitless litigation in which David K. Tone and Henry M. Ashton were engaged. Mr. Ashton is an active member of the mayor's kitchen cabinet, and Mr. Tone, who is an ex-officio member of the cabinet, is the attorney for the federation of labor, who told the mayor that the ordinances he fosters were all wrong, whereupon the mayor promptly repudiated them. The $6,500 was paid to the clerk of the Supreme court of the United States in cases in which Mr. Tone and Mr. Ashton were not successful. These were known as the Samuel B. Raymond cases, and were against the People's Gaslight and Coke company, the Union Traction company, the Chicago City railway company, the South Chicago railway company, and the Chicago Edison company. They represented an unsuccessful attempt on the part of the city to add to its tax revenue. Corporation Counsel Lewis refused to pay the costs in the unsuccessful suits, and they were then paid for out of the mayor's convenient contingent fund.

Political Friends Draw Pay.

Cremin & O'Connor were paid $100 for the valuation of the Goodrich docks. Mr. Cremin is said to be a political friend of the mayor. I. D. Wilcox drew $65 for inspecting coal and procuring evidence against the Standard Washed Coal company for the fire department. James J. Kelly, another expert on coal, was paid $250 for an examination and report on fuel at the fire engine houses.

Several vouchers appear for the salary of Dr. Maurice F. Doty, the city superintendent of transportation, or, as he puts it in his bill, "services as local transportation expert," at the rate of $250 a month. That was before Dr. Doty was put on the regular pay roll. He no longer has to depend on the mayor's contingent fund for his salary and can earn his $250 a month for circulating referendum petitions and such work without any apprehension that he will have to wait for it.

Traction Expenses Heavy.

The principal items in the expense of appraising the traction properties, as they appear in the contingent fund vouchers, are:

The Arnold company	$24,282
A. B. Dupont	3,260
Field, Hinchman & Smith	2,125
M. E. Cooley	4,913

Corporation Counsel Lewis said he hoped by next Monday to have ready for the council a complete list of all employés and the amount of money they had received. Col. Lewis also hoped to be in a position to tell what the employés, most of them political friends of the mayor or friends of his political friends, had been doing to earn the large salaries they had been receiving.

Work for City Part of Time.

The prosecuting attorney's office, the smallest branch of the city's legal department, has escaped in a large measure the flood of Dunne appointees.

The men under the supervision of Prosecuting Attorney Howard S. Taylor are, with one exception, all assigned to the police and civil courts to watch the interests of the city. Their pay is mediocre and, as a rule, they are obliged to give but half a day to the city's service, putting in the rest of their time in private practice. Of the twenty-three men on the pay roll of that department for January fifteen have private law offices, two have resigned, one is engaged in office work, and the rest, as far as is known, have no outside interests.

With few exceptions, the lawyers on Mr. Taylor's staff said they were poorly paid and overworked. From the conversation of some of them it was gathered that they gave all their time to the city for a pittance, renting spacious offices in downtown buildings for the purpose of having a place where they might retire in peace and work out the difficult problems they were engaged in handling for the city.

The prosecuting attorney's pay roll for January totals $2,516. The names of the men on the list are well known in their own wards. Several of the lawyers have been appointed by the mayor for their political connections.

Taylor a Harrison Holdover.

Chief Prosecutor Taylor is a Harrison holdover, who supported the Independence league at the last election. He is now supposed to be working for Mayor Dunne.

His first assistant, James Donahue, is engaged in office work for Mr. Taylor in the city offices in Room 513 of the Ashland block, 59 Clark street. He has a private law office in Room 1606 of the same building. He said he gave most of his time to Mr. Taylor's work, but, as far as he knew, there was no objection to private work.

Charles C. Case Jr., an assistant, was appointed Jan. 1. He takes care of smoke cases at the Municipal Court building and has a private law office in Room 56, 92 La Salle street. He said his city work took all of his time. He was a candidate on the Independence league ticket for clerk of the Circuit court and is a former Circuit court clerk under James J. Gray.

Former Justice Is Cared For.

James C. Dooley, as assistant, is assigned to the Desplaines street Municipal court, where he has to put in most of his time. He is a former justice of the peace, and was a candidate on the democratic ticket for Municipal judge.

Nicholas V. Fischer, as assistant, is a democratic worker in the Sixteenth ward. He has a law office at 1221, 108 La Salle street. According to his stenographer, he is there about half the time, putting in his mornings at the Sheffield avenue Municipal court.

George S. Foster, an assistant, is a democratic committeeman from the Twenty-seventh ward. He is a former alderman, and once ran for congress. He has a private law office at room 702, 59 Dearborn street. He said he would starve if it was not for his private practice.

Le Roy Hackett, an assistant, is a former employé of the sewer department. He has a private law office at room 1218, 59 Clark street, and is stationed at the Harrison street Municipal court. His stenographer said he was not in his office much.

Precinct Captain Gets Job.

Charles Horgan, an assistant, is a democratic precinct captain in the Sixth ward. He is a recent Dunne appointee and has a private law office at room 323, 59 Clark street. In the same office are John E. Owens and E. J. Stack, attorneys for the Police Benevolent association. He says his city work takes nearly all of his time.

Michael Koch, an assistant, is secretary of the Twenty-first Ward Democratic club. He is assigned to the Chicago avenue Municipal court, and has a private office at room 614, 108 La Salle street.

John J. McManaman, an assistant, was a candidate for alderman against Brennan in the Eighteenth ward in the last election. He has a private office at room 1511, 79 Dearborn street, and runs a boys' club at 428 Washington boulevard. He spends two days a week in the Juvenile court and is seldom at his private office.

Bernard G. Matz, an assistant, is secretary of the Sixteenth Ward Democratic club. He is assigned to the West Chicago avenue Municipal court and has a private law office at room 901, 120 Randolph street.

Frank B. Murray, an assistant, is assigned to the Englewood Municipal court. He has a private office at room 628, 97 Clark street, where his stenographer said he could be found any day between noon and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Looks After Private Business.

Robert E. O'Brien, an assistant, is assigned to civil courts. He has a private law office at room 427, 97 Clark street, where his stenographer said he could be found most of the time.

John F. Power, an assistant, is in charge of smoke cases in civil courts. He is a member of the law firm of Power & Byrnes, at room 930, 112 Clark street. He said he could not afford to pay rent out of his salary from the city.

Vincent H. Perkins, an assistant, spends most of his time doing work for the city on a small salary. He is a Robert E. Burke man from the Twenty-first ward and is lining up the south end of the ward for Mayor Dunne.

Edward A. Prindiville, an assistant, is a democratic committeeman from the Twelfth ward, and is assigned to the Hyde Park Municipal court. He has a private law office at room 623, 97 Clark street, where he can be found from 11 a. m. on, according to his stenographer.

Samuel A. T. Watkins, an assistant, is assigned to the Thirty-fifth street Municipal court. He can be found during the afternoon at his private office, room 308, 80 Dearborn street, according to a clerk in that office.

George Brinkman and Frank P. Danisch recently resigned from the staff.

URGES NEGRO TO END STRIFE.

William T. Vernon, Registrar of Treasury, Tells Hearers to Ignore Advice of the Notoriety Seeker.

"Keep the children in school, because idleness leads to devilry; cut out impassioned utterances, and be careful about your public remarks, and the race question will properly solve itself," was the advice given out by William T. Vernon, D. D., LL. D., the negro registrar of the United States treasury, to a large audience at Quinn chapel, A. M. E. church, Wabash avenue and Twenty-fourth street, last night.

The topic was "The Negro in America," and there was an impression that the speaker would indulge in fireworks oratory, but such thoughts were dismissed when Mr. Vernon took exception to a reference made to the "Brownsville incident" by A. H. Roberts, the presiding officer.

The speaker reviewed the history of the negro in America. "Education," he said, "will prove the negro's salvation, and when he learns to take the advice of people who have proven themselves worthy, instead of the notoriety seeker who continually is creating trouble, the texture of his skin and the kinks in his hair will not operate against him."

DECIDES AGAINST EQUITABLE LIFE.

Federal Court Holds Society Must Answer Fraud Allegations.

MAYOR WINKS AT VICE?

New Yorker Says McClellan Urged the Transfer of a Dutiful Inspector.

NEW YORK BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE, New York, Feb. 7.

Equitable Life Must Answer as to Surplus.

The Equitable Life Assurance society, under a decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today, must answer to the bill of complaint filed against it by J. Wilcox Brown to the effect that the society's surplus had not been equitably divided among the policy holders. A demurrer alleging that there was no cause of action, and that the defendant was not entitled to the relief applied for, had been sustained by a lower court, but the previous decision was overruled by the Court of Appeals today. The Circuit court held that, as the bill of complaint contained allegations of fraud and mismanagement upon the part of the society, the plaintiff is entitled to an answer.

The bill of complaint filed by Mr. Brown, the holder of policies aggregating $75,000, first states that the capital stock of the Equitable was limited to $100,000, and the holders of this stock were entitled to a dividend of 5½ per cent, and that the net earnings accumulated by the company were to have been equitably credited to the policy holders. The plaintiff charges that he did not receive his true share of the surplus, which, he declares, was wrongfully retained and wasted by the officers of the society.

The higher tribunal, in overruling the demurrer, states that the case is remanded to the court below, and the "defendant, if it be so advised, has leave to answer within such time as the Circuit court shall decree." This gives the defendant the privilege of answering to the bill as already filed.

Says McClellan Stopped Vice Suppression.

At a hearing this afternoon in Albany before the assembly cities committee on the Prentice bill, increasing the powers of the police commissioner of New York, at which Police Commissioner Bingham was present, Assemblyman Vose, in opposing the measure, asserted that "the present mayor of New York," in his first term of office, once telephoned the then commissioner of police and ordered him to transfer a certain inspector because he was too active in suppressing vice and thereby was alienating votes for the mayor.

Minority Leader Oliver arose and said that, while he was "persona non grata" at the mayor's office, he thought the statement was a lie.

In explaining his need for the bill Commissioner Bingham said that the police regulations were all right. "I have found, however, that they are not always carried out." When asked what he wanted to do with the inspectors he replied: "Make them do their duty, which they don't do now."

The principal ground of opposition to the bill was the immense political power which it was said such a bill might place in the hands of the mayor through the commissioner. In speaking of this point Assemblyman Voss said: "The mayor of the city of New York cannot be trusted in carrying out the provisions of this bill."

Woman Tells Police She Whipped Doctor.

Laboring under excitement, a woman walked into the police station at Flushing this afternoon to give herself up. She told the sergeant she had just horsewhipped a doctor. She said she was Mrs. Catherine F. Reilly of Flushing. The sergeant refused to lock her up and she told where she could be found at any time she was wanted.

M. J. K. Reilly, husband of the woman, said she had gone to the office of Dr. George R. McKelway in Flushing in the afternoon, and used a dog whip on him. She had reason for doing as she did, Mr. Reilly said. He refused to allow his wife to be seen.

Dr. McKelway admitted there had been trouble in his office during the afternoon. Dr. McKelway is a well known physician and is well on in years. Judge Moore, his counsel, said: "There was a difference of opinion between the doctor and Mrs. Reilly relative to a medical matter. She thought the doctor did not treat her right medically. She had a stick or something and struck the doctor. She was much excited."

Dr. McKelway is a brother of St. Clair McKelway, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle.

Carnegie Praises Power of the Press.

Magazine and newspaper editors to the number of several score gathered this evening at the Yale club as the guests of the Peace Society of New York, and with the idea of furthering the society's efforts for international peace. Andrew Carnegie was not able to be present, but in a letter of regret wrote:

"The pen has indeed become mightier than the sword, which it controls, keeping it in the scabbard or drawing it forth to slay. International relations are really dependent upon the pen in the hands of editors of the press. This is especially so in Europe.

"In the cause of peace, which ranks first with all of us of the Peace society, we would press upon our friends the sense of responsibility which rests upon them and beseech their cooperation, hoping that their decisive influence may always be against the appeal to arms and in favor of peaceful arbitration."

Gotham Theaters Cut Off All Speculators.

Asserting that speculation in theater tickets had brought much criticism and ill feeling upon the managers of theaters in New York City, Daniel Frohman today announced that after a conference the managers of many of the play houses in the city had decided to end the nuisance by allowing no speculation and discontinuing the sale of tickets to agents and managers of news stands in the hotels.

Mr. Frohman made this announcement in a hearing before a committee on laws and legislation of the board of aldermen on a resolution describing any person or company beside the manager or lessee of a theater "or his agent" who offers for sale or does sell a ticket to a theater or place of amusement as a speculator and providing a fine of $50 for each offense.

Will Appeal to President for Woman's Rights.

Lady Tennessee Claflin Cook has decided to make one more appeal here to the powers that be for the rights of women. Lady Cook's last appeal to those same powers, she says, was in 1871, when she asked President Johnson to please enforce the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments and give to her sex the same voting rights that the negroes had.

President Roosevelt is to have the chance this time, and Lady Cook said tonight that she believed he would do something. She has secured an audience with the president for Saturday, and, with the help of Miss Olive Logan, she will present her case.

Seven Persons Badly Injured in Fire.

Seven persons were badly injured, several more were slightly hurt, and the lives of many others endangered by a fire in a three story factory building in Wooster street today. All the seriously injured sustained their injuries by jumping from windows of the top floor after their escape by the stairways had been cut off by the flames. Five of the injured are in a critical condition.

Gilman, Hugh H. Hanna, Morris K. Jesup, and Walter H. Page.

A copy of this letter will be engrossed on parchment and sent to each member of the board for his autograph signature, and will then be formally presented to Mr. Rockefeller.

Fund in Good Hands.

The members of the board who will administer Mr. Rockefeller's immense gift include some of the best known educators, financiers, publicists, and philanthropists in the country. Mr. Alderman is the president of the University of Virginia; Mr. Andrews, chancellor of the University of Nebraska; Mr. Frissell is principal of Hampton institute; Mr. Gates is business and benevolent representative of John D. Rockefeller; Daniel C. Gilman is former president of Johns Hopkins university and president of the Carnegie institution in Washington; Mr. Henry is a well known publicist and trustee of various educational institutions; Mr. Jesup is well known as a patron of art and science, and particularly of Arctic exploration; Mr. Judson is head and professor of political science and dean of the faculties of arts, literature and science, University of Chicago; Mr. Ogden is an officer of various educational institutions and president of the southern education board; Mr. Page is editor of the World's Work; Mr. Peabody is a banker and director of various educational and philanthropic institutions, and Mr. Shaw is editor of the Review of Reviews.

Gift to Beloit College.

While the board was in session today gifts to five colleges were ordered, amounting in all to $400,000, as follows: Beloit college, Beloit, Wis.; Morningside college, Sioux City, Ia.; Lafayette college, Easton, Pa., $50,000 each. Wabash college, Crawfordsville, Ind., and the University of Wooster, Wooster, O., each $125,000.

In 1903 the general education board was chartered by congress. It employs a force of experts in the continuous and systematic study of educational conditions in all parts of the United States. The object of the organization is promoting education in the states of the union by means of gifts and otherwise.

The organization was adapted to assist Mr. Rockefeller in the distribution of his gifts to education; but it was not intended to limit the work of the board to the administration of funds given by him, said Chairman Frederick T. Gates, who stated in his explanation of the purposes of the organization:

"It was rather designed to meet a wider need and to offer a medium through which other men of means who desire to promote education in its various forms in the United States could do so in a systematic, intelligent, and effective way, and the board is being so used extensively by philanthropists.

Started by Oil Magnate.

"In March, 1902, John D. Rockefeller pledged $1,000,000 to the work of the board, confining its use particularly to the study and promotion of education in the southern states."

On June 30, 1905, through Mr. Gates, Mr. Rockefeller gave the board $10,000,000 in securities, the principal to be held in perpetuity as a foundation for education, the income above expenses of administration to be distributed to, or used for, the benefit of such institutions of learning as the board might deem best adapted to promote a comprehensive system of higher education in the United States. These were the simple conditions and the brief form in which Mr. Rockefeller endowed the board.

From the income of the original funds of $11,000,000 conditional subscriptions have already been made to eighteen colleges in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, amounting to a total of $1,077,500. As a condition of receiving these gifts the colleges are raising the further total sum of $3,262,500.

OBITUARY.

LIEUT. ABBOTT L. ADAMS, 64 years old, died yesterday at his residence, 350 Ontario street, of pneumonia, after an illness of six days. He was born at Keene, N. H., and came to Chicago with his father's family in 1853. On the fall of Fort Sumter he enlisted for three months in battery A, Chicago Light artillery, and afterwards in the Board of Trade battery, was wounded at Stone river, and served until the end of the war. At the time of his death he was a member of the Loyal legion, the George H. Thomas post, G. A. R., and of the Union and Athletic clubs. He is survived by a brother, George E. Adams, and his sisters, Miss C. D. Adams, 350 Ontario street, and Mrs. William Pierson of Orange, N. J.

ABBOTT L. ADAMS, 60 years old, died of pneumonia last evening at the residence of his sister, Miss Caroline Adams, 350 Ontario street. He was a brother of ex-Congressman George E. Adams, and for many years was in the real estate business at 184 La Salle street. He served in the civil war and was mustered out as a lieutenant. He never married, and he made his home with his sister.

GEORGE JOACHIM GOSCHEN (Viscount Goschen) died suddenly yesterday at his residence, Seacox Heath Hawkhurst, England, of heart failure. He was chancellor of the exchequer in Lord Salisbury's second administration and afterwards was first lord of the admiralty, serving in this position for five years.

OFFERS BALM TO AUSTIN.

HOUSE NAMES A HARMONY COMMITTEE ON EXPENSES.

Efforts in Line with Campaign in Which Representative Will Be Convinced That Record of Present Assembly for Extravagance Will Not Outstrip That of Previous Bodies—Veteran of G. A. R. Not Willing to Warm Up to Small Work

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The controversy between Chairman Henry W. Austin and the rest of the legislature over contingent expenses now is in the hands of a harmonizing or arbitration committee consisting of Representatives Church, McRoberts, and Pierson.

An attempt was made to assuage Mr. Austin this morning before the session of the legislature, with only partial success, and after the session the house steering committee again took up the difficulty, with the result that a harmonizing committee was appointed to see what can be done.

Mr. Austin is still strenuous in his refusal to be a "fall guy" for the rest of the house. He has discovered to his consternation that one of a lot of pages employed to chase gayly around on errands for statesmen is a G. A. R. veteran, who has been employed as page on request of a down state member. At first Mr. Austin thought he could utilize this veteran page as janitor, but the veteran allowed he was employed as page and refused to "janit." Then Mr. Austin suggested that he do a bit of paging, but the veteran allowed he was too old to "chase around with them bills."

There Are Other Troubles.

This is one of the difficulties confronting the arbitration committee. There are others. There is a small matter of supplies for statesmen, including copies of the revised statutes. Members insist that each representative should be given one copy of the laws of the state. There are coarse persons who say that each should be given three copies, but such remarks come from an evil nature.

Mr. Austin is of opinion that one copy supplied each committee room is sufficient. In this he is supported by Representative Chipperfield, who goes further and affirms that one copy suspended from a cross beam in the middle of the hall of representatives by a long rubber band would serve all purposes. With such an attachment this solitary copy could be taken to all parts of the house, and a member, when through with it, could return it by merely releasing it to fly back to its proper place.

The arbitration committee hopes to be able to make such progress as to reach a safe, conservative estimate of expenses as will satisfy Mr. Austin that when the work of the legislature is done his committee will not be accountable for the largest expenditures in recent years. Mr. Austin has his doubts that this can be done.

Suggests Prayer Scheme.

Speaker Shurtleff, in whose constituency is Zion City, gave testimony today to his belief that Dr. Frank Billings, president of the state board of charities, should include treatment by prayer in his scheme for improvement for state institutions. Mr. Shurtleff would place prayer on a par with hydrotherapeutics as a cure for insanity. Dr. Billings is asking for an appropriation for the latter. Mr. Shurtleff suggests the propriety of an appropriation for the latter.

Frank E. Chamberlain of New Boston, Ill., wrote the legislature a letter in care of Mr. Shurtleff, and the speaker turned it over to the house today. In this letter Mr. Chamberlain pleaded that the Salvation Army be given a chance to pray for insane patients in asylums.

ISABELLE URQUHART IS DEAD.

Actress Succumbs Suddenly in Rochester, N. Y., Two Weeks After Operation for Appendicitis.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Isabelle Urquhart, the actress, who has been ill at the Homeopathic hospital for two weeks, died suddenly tonight of internal hemorrhages. Miss Urquhart was playing the part of Aurora with Arnold Daly in "How He Lied to Her Husband" when she was taken ill. She was to have appeared here, but when she reached the city her condition was so serious that she was taken to the hospital, where she was operated on for appendicitis.

Isabelle Urquhart was born in New York Dec. 9, 1885. Her father died when she was only 4 years old. When but a young girl she appeared as a chorus girl in "Billie Taylor" at the old Standard theater in New York. She later joined the Daly theater company and in 1895 joined E. E. Rice's company. She later joined Lawrence Barrett, playing many important rôles, including Portia in "Julius Cæsar."

Miss Urquhart left the serious rôles and returned to the comic opera and musical plays a few years later. In recent years Miss Urquhart had returned to the drama, appearing with Mr. Arnold Daly in plays written by George Bernard Shaw. Miss Urquhart was married to Guy Standing, an actor, in 1893, in London. She was divorced from him in 1899.

SUES FOUR BANKS FOR FRAUD.

Lima, O., Institutions Charged with Having Unlawful Agreements with Country Treasurers Since 1888.

Lima, O., Feb. 7.—Following an investigation by the grand jury suits were filed today by Prosecuting Attorney B. F. Welty against the Ohio National bank, City bank, First National, and Metropolitan banks. The prosecutor declares all of these institutions have had "private, secret, and unlawful agreements" with every county treasurer since 1888, regarding the borrowing of county moneys. He asks a complete accounting and interest at 6 per cent.

MANY NEW BILLS FOR PUBLIC WEAL

Illinois Assembly Emphasizes Its Interest in Behalf of People.

CORPORATIONS HIT HARD.

Measure Proposes Tax on Trolley and Phone Poles; Check on Sunday Amusements.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Additional evidence was produced today to prove that the Forty-fifth general assembly of the state of Illinois has the welfare of the people at heart and proposes, if possible, to legislate in all directions for public security, health, and prosperity.

It has been remarked before that this assembly is particularly solicitous regarding the public weal as threatened by corporation wiles and brutality, and the bills introduced today give additional point to the remark. Some of the bills presented may appear to be a trifle hard on the corporations, firms, and persons concerned, but severity seems to be called for in these perilous times, and besides, the proposed measures have been sent to conservative and statesmanlike committees which will look to it in all cases that no barbarities are practiced.

Bill on Sunday Amusements.

There is one bill which would restrain unbridled license on the part of amusement purveying concerns operating on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday. It is calculated to interest not only the ball park managements but also liberal minded proprietors of beer gardens, theater managements, etc. It provides:

"Whoever keeps open or maintains by himself, agent, or employé on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, any place of amusement in any building or park grounds or inclosure of any kind, to which an admission fee is charged, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be fined not to exceed $200, and any shift, device, or subterfuge to evade this act shall be deemed a violation thereof."

Another bill seeks to increase the revenue of cities, towns, and counties by placing a tax on all trolley poles, telephone and telegraph poles at the rate of $2 a year in city limits and $1 a year in the country. It was introduced by Representative Walsh, and already has attracted the interested attention of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies and Union Traction and City railway companies in Chicago. Various other street car companies and interurban syndicates may get interested later.

Cold Storage Measure.

Representative McLaughlin has introduced a cold storage bill like the proposed cold storage ordinance which kept the Chicago city council in a ferment, and containing provisions which Congressman Lorimer and ex-Congressman Wadsworth managed to keep out of the packers' bill when it was adopted by congress.

Mr. McLaughlin desires that all perishable foodstuffs placed in cold storage be plainly stamped to show the date when placed in storage, and he desires to have it made a law that no undrawn poultry be placed in storage.

Further, he would provide that no foodstuffs or meats be kept in cold storage longer than six months; that when goods have been in six months they shall be officially inspected under the direction of the commissioner of health, and if found fit for use shall be sold also to the highest bidder. If an owner refuses to permit such sale, then the commissioner of health may use discretion to condemn or to permit storage for a further limited period, at the end of which extension it shall be declared unfit for use.

It is provided that all cold storage warehouses shall be licensed with a fee of $500 and filing a bond of $10,000. The bill proposes to demand that application for licenses shall be accompanied by a certificate from the commissioner of health stating whether the place where it is proposed to license a warehouse be in sanitary condition and a fit place to carry on such a business.

To Regulate Powder Storage.

Representative Walter Lants has taken another unkind swat at the so-called powder trust, introducing a bill which has been in the legislature before, prohibiting the storing of more than 1,000 pounds of explosives within 500 yards of any inhabited dwelling outside of the limits of any city or village.

Under the provisions of this bill any ambitious and energetic citizen possessed of a movable house, such as can be obtained without excessive expenditure, could drive the powder plants off the map of Illinois by persisting in moving his habitation within the prohibited 500 yards.

Representative Lane has introduced a bill to protect persons accused of crime from activity of photographers, either newspaper, police, or private. His bill would prohibit the taking of an accused person's picture unless he has been convicted of felony and unless he consents in writing. It also makes it unlawful to keep the picture of the accused unless he has been convicted of a felony.

Anti-Cigaret Bill Passed.

The senate has helped along the cause of reform by passing Senator Berry's anti-cigaret bill, which prohibits any minor under 18 years and any minor attending any school, academy, college, or university from smoking cigarets in any public place, and also fixing penalties for the sale of cigarets to minors.

This bill now will be sent to the house and Mr. Berry is willing to bet $7 it passes the lower body and becomes a law. However, the members of both houses went over to the University of Illinois today and "we shall see what we shall see."

Senator Lish introduced a demurrage bill providing that railroads, upon written request of any shipper to furnish one or more freight cars to be loaded for shipment over roads, shall, within seven days thereafter place at loading point, car or cars required. For each twenty-four hours' delay or fraction thereof by the road in not placing such cars at a loading point after the expiration of seven days such delinquent railroad company shall become indebted, and, upon demand, shall pay to the shipper the sum of $1 for each and every car demanded.

Three civil service bills were introduced in both houses, in the senate by McKenzie and in the house by Pogue. They were drafted by the state civil service commission, but only one likely will be pushed hard. That makes certain changes in the present state law, simplifying the powers of the commissioners, especially giving them the right to hold examinations out of the state.

New Bills Introduced.

A few of the other bills introduced were:

SENATE.

By Juul—Provides that a county shall bear the expense of preparing a record for any person convicted and sentenced to death to appeal the case, if such person state on oath he is unable to procure such record.

By McShane—Providing that cars shall be provided with appliances for raising or lowering them in case of accident.

By Chaffee—Providing that the superintendent of insurance shall receive a salary of $7,500 and shall be elected instead of appointed by the governor.

HOUSE.

By Golden—Requiring the reading of the bible without sectarian comment in public schools of the state.

By Haas—Appropriating $25,000 to enable the state agricultural experiment station to investigate and endeavor to find a remedy for insect injury to the corn crop of the state.

By Smejkal—Sanitary district bill increasing the bond issue and tax levy; practically the same bill is before the senate.

By Mills—Bills drawn by State's Attorney Healy to regulate the disposition of fees and fix a salary of $10,000 for his office.

The house advanced to third reading the senate bill which sets the election of the Superior court judgeship, now held by Judge Ben Smith, for April 2 instead of November.

FRISCO MAY YIELD POINT.

MAYOR SCHMITZ TALKS OF CONTROVERSY OF THE JAPANESE.

Much as He Loves His Native City, He Declares His Willingness to Make Concessions if Necessary for the Welfare of the United States—Passes Through Chicago on His Way to Washington to Confer with President Roosevelt.

"Not that I love Frisco less, but my country more. I was born in San Francisco and am for her first, last, and always, but still above all I am an American. I would concede my position rather than see it become injurious to the country."

These words, uttered by Mayor Eugene Schmitz of San Francisco in Chicago yesterday, explain the position he now holds on the Japanese segregation question that has involved the national government and the people of San Francisco in the present controversy.

Mayor Schmitz, four members of the board of education of San Francisco, and the superintendent of San Francisco schools stopped off in Chicago a couple of hours en route to Washington, D. C., in response to an invitation from President Roosevelt. The other members of the party were L. F. Walsh, president of the board of education; T. F. Boyle, D. Oliver, and A. Altmann, members of the board; and A. Roncovieri, superintendent of the public schools. The party left here on a Pennsylvania train at 5:30 o'clock.

Uncertain as to the Result.

"We have prepared no 'case,' because we don't even know exactly what is the purport of our mission," Mayor Schmitz said. "The president did not say what the nature of the hearing would be further than that we were to have a discussion on the Japanese matter. I suppose it will be discussed before the president and his cabinet. We probably can give a good deal of information concerning the demand of the people of San Francisco that has not yet reached the president.

"I cannot say that the matter will reach an entirely satisfactory settlement during our visit, but we hope it will. The law, as a matter of fact, is nothing new, but the enforcement of it seems to have created an agitation. The law to segregate the Mongolians in the schools was made in 1871, but the Japs claim they are not Mongolians. The Chinese always have been segregated in the public schools. The Japs think they are better than the Chinese. I don't care to criticise President Roosevelt. It is simply a question of national treaty rights and state rights."

Rapidly Rebuilding the City.

Concerning the reclaiming of the devastated city, the mayor said the progress made is almost beyond comprehension.

"A building has been built for every forty-five minutes since the quake," he said. "Wages are high for skilled labor, and living expenses naturally are high in proportion.

"The graft charges are only malicious political work to which there are no grounds."

Mayor Schmitz is under indictment in connection with these charges, but he scouts the idea of there ever being a conviction in his case.

HITS OKLAHOMA STATEHOOD.

Missouri Representative Would Repeal Act—Says Convention Refused to Adopt U. S. Constitution.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—Representative Murphy of Missouri introduced a resolution today to repeal the act admitting Oklahoma to statehood on the ground that the constitutional convention of Oklahoma and Indian Territory has failed to comply with the conditions of the joint statehood act.

Mr. Murphy's bill alleges that the convention refused to adopt the constitution of the United States, that it is attempting to evade giving equal civil and political rights to all races, that the convention has squandered the people's money in unnecessary political bickerings, leaving none for an election for the ratification of the proposed constitution, and that it has disregarded and ignored the disbursing officer of the government.

After practically two days' debate the proposition in the Indian appropriation bill to remove restrictions to the alienation of the surplus lands of full blood Indians in the Indian Territory was defeated in the senate today by a vote of 31 to 22.

Bids for Oklahoma's Capital.

Guthrie, Okla., Feb. 7.—Sapulpa, I. T., today offered a proposition to the constitutional convention to locate the capital of the new state at that place. It was agreed to furnish 100 acres of land, to give $100,000 cash, and to furnish light and heat for the state buildings free of charge for fifty years.

AID FOR CHICAGO DRAINAGE.

River and Harbor Bill, with Increased Appropriations, Is Passed by the House.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—The house today passed the river and harbor appropriation bill, carrying more than $83,000,000, with sundry amendments, all of which were suggested by the chairman of the committee, Mr. Burton of Ohio.

An increase was made in the appropriation for continuing the improvement and for the maintenance of the Chicago river. The total now is $200,000.

The paragraph in relation to the Calumet river, Illinois and Indiana, was amended so as to authorize the secretary of war to enter into a contract to complete the project, for which $191,500 is appropriated. The aggregate cost is limited to $170,000, exclusive of the amounts heretofore appropriated.

REJECT CANAL BIDS—STEVENS.

Chief Engineer Says He Will Resign Unless Government Carries On Work of Construction.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—The administration has been brought face to face with the alternative of rejecting all bids for the construction of the Panama canal by contract or losing the services of Chief Engineer John F. Stevens. This is the reason for the delay of President Roosevelt, Secretary Taft, and Chairman Shonts of the canal commission in acting on the Oliver bid.

An effort has been made to get Mr. Stevens to change his mind, but he has continued obdurate and the indications are that the administration will accede to his request and the construction will be continued by the government.

Secretary Taft today made known to Mr. Oliver the result of his talk with the president and framed a letter to Judge O'Brien, W. J. Oliver's counsel, informing him just how the matter stood. This letter stated, among other things, that the president was much inclined to give the contract to Mr. Oliver and his associates, but that he would not surrender his right to reject all bids, even after the further hearing has been given to the McArthur-Gillespie combination.

UNCLE SAM RUNS A SWEATSHOP

Secretary Shaw Declares Conditions in Building Where Paper Money Is Printed Are Almost Unbearable.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—In a letter to Speaker Cannon Secretary Shaw says of the building in Washington occupied by the bureau of engraving and printing:

"I doubt if a worse sweatshop exists on earth than the factory in which the government manufactures its money, its bonds, its internal revenue and postoffice stamps. The condition of the employés, especially in summer, is well nigh unbearable, and every consideration pleads for improvement."

The house committee on buildings and grounds will conduct a hearing tomorrow on a bill providing for a new building to accommodate this bureau.

A SIMPLE HOME MIXTURE SAID TO RELIEVE BACKACHE AND KIDNEY TROUBLE. FIX IT YOURSELF.

Take care of backache. A great many cases of kidney complaint are reported about here, also bladder trouble and rheumatism.

A local physician stated that pain in the back, loins or region of the kidneys is the danger signal nature hangs out to notify the sufferer that there is something wrong with the kidneys, which should receive immediate attention. Only vegetable treatment should be administered and absolutely no alcoholic patent medicines, which are harmful to the kidneys and bladder.

The following prescription, while simple, harmless and inexpensive, is known and recognized as a sovereign remedy for kidney complaint. The ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy and anyone can mix them: Compound Kargon, one ounce; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

This preparation is said to restore the natural function of the kidneys so they will sift and strain the poisonous waste matter, uric acid, etc., from the blood, purifying it and relieving rheumatism. Backache will be relieved, the urine will be neutralized and cleared, and no longer a cause of irritation, thereby overcoming such symptoms as weak bladder, painful, frequent and other urinary difficulties.

SMOKE INSPECTOR ACCUSED BY CLUB

Formal Charges of Incompetency and Neglect Made Against Schubert.

ASSISTANT ALSO ACCUSED.

Mechanical Superintendent Is Called Inefficient or Careless; Fight to Be Pressed.

The crux of the City club's investigation of Mayor Dunne's smoke inspection bureau was reached yesterday, when definite charges against Chief Inspector John C. Schubert and R. B. Wilcox, superintendent of mechanical engineers of the boiler department, were filed with the civil service commission by Frank X. Busch, attorney for the investigators.

The charges fill several typewritten sheets and name many reasons why both men should be dismissed from the service. Schubert is accused of incompetency and willful failure to enforce the ordinances. Wilcox is charged with incompetency or neglect of duty. The filing of the documents in the afternoon was the chief development of the investigation now in progress before the commission.

Mr. Busch last night said the fight against the inspectors would be carried on until every phase of the case is investigated thoroughly. He also declared that the City club members would urge the dismissal of the men from office. With the charges filed, he expressed confidence that the justice of the City club's claims would be established.

Delights at Small Point.

Following the reading of the charges Attorney Sexton, representing the inspectors, closely cross questioned Robert Kuss, one of the chief witnesses for the City club. The attorney asked the witness to explain fully his investigations of smoke violations. In the course of the testimony one of Kuss' entries concerning smoke violations at the First National Bank building was cited.

"Where is the First National Bank building," asked Mr. Sexton.

"It is at the corner of Clark and Monroe streets," answered Kuss hesitatingly.

Sexton smiled when Kuss gave an erroneous location for the building. The attorney asked for a recess, which was granted. Then followed a tilt between Sexton and Busch. Sexton scoffed at the thought of having Kuss as a witness.

"Why, it is unfair for you people to have a witness of this sort," said Sexton. "He cannot remember the location of buildings he watched for smoke violations. He is uncertain about his facts. A court would pay no attention to his evidence. You cannot expect to hang a case on his testimony."

"How can a man remember months back just where buildings are located and just what size and color a certain smoke stack may be?" argued Busch.

Charges Against Schubert.

Some of the specific complaints lodged against Schubert in the formal charges are:

Incompetency.

Ignorance of duties, responsibilities, and scope of his position.

Lack of knowledge of his powers under the ordinances and ignorance of proper engineering knowledge.

Unbusinesslike management of his office; failure to keep proper records or employ inspectors to the best advantage.

Willful failure to enforce the ordinances in the matter of issuance of permits; failure to require plans and specifications, and failure to see that ordinances are obeyed after issuance of permits.

Improperly granting immunity from prosecution during alterations.

Discrimination between offenders to be prosecuted.

Failure to require proper reports on boilers and furnaces.

The charges against Supt. Wilcox are:

Incompetency or neglect of duty.

Ignorance of duties and powers; failure to require submission of plans.

Failure to comply with the law in issuance of permits for construction, alterations, and repairs.

GIRL MISSING; REVIVAL CAUSE?

Austin Police Asked to Hunt for Florence Isenberg, Who Left Huntington, Ind., Two Weeks Ago.

The police of Austin have been asked to look for Florence Isenberg, 16 years old, who has been missing from her home in Huntington, Ind., for two weeks.

According to the parents the girl was deeply interested in revival services in Huntington two weeks ago under the direction of the Rev. Charles R. Scoville, who is now holding similar meetings in the Austin Methodist church.

She left home about the same time the services were concluded, and her parents fear she followed the meetings to Chicago.

Guthrie Bowlder Must Go.

The bowlder was brought to Chicago by Ossian Guthrie to perpetuate the memory of his grandfather, Dr. Samuel Guthrie, who first found a practical use for chloroform.

THREE KILLED IN WRECK

GREAT WESTERN FLYER CRASHES INTO GRAIN ELEVATOR.

Engineer of "Evening Express," Killed in Disaster, Blamed by Officials for Alleged Failure to Obey Order to Avoid Derailed Car on the Main Line Near German Valley—Relief Train, with Victims, Hits Buggy on Crossing.

Three persons were killed and a score injured when the Chicago Great Western train No. 5, known as the "Evening Express," ran through a switch and was wrecked near German Valley, a small town ninety-six miles from Chicago, early yesterday.

The Dead.

CLINE, MARTIN, engineer, 503 Forty-sixth avenue, Chicago; instantly killed.

NELS, LOUIS, Minneapolis, Minn., railway mail clerk; body not recovered from wreckage of elevator.

JACOBSON, PAUL F., Chicago, mail clerk; buried under wreck of cars and grain from elevator.

Some of the Injured.

PRUMBLE, R. N., fireman, Dubuque, Ia.; severely burned and internally injured; willdie.

KOONTZ, MRS. I. N., of Fort Dodge, riding in chair car; severely injured; may not recover.

HARLOCK, JAMES, Union Pacific railroad conductor, riding in engine cab; legs broken and burned; may not recover.

JAMIESON, WILLIAM, express messenger; burned; taken to hospital at German Valley; may not recover.

Officials of the road blame the dead engineer. It is said he failed to obey an order directing that the passenger train run through German Valley on a siding, to avoid a wrecked box car which blockaded the main line. Evidently the engineer did not slacken the speed of the train, which was traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour. When the locomotive hit the switch it veered off to the right and crashed into a grain elevator.

Wheat Buries Wreckage.

The impact caused the elevator to burst, and 100 tons of wheat poured out in a steady stream until the engine, baggage, and one mail car were buried. Two of the mail coaches telescoped. The fireman and engineer were imprisoned in the cab. The engineer was killed by the escaping steam before rescuers could reach him, but Fireman Prumble was taken out fatally injured.

The private car of Supt. C. T. Stemble was attached to the wrecked train. It and the sleepers remained upright on the track. The baggage, mail, and chair cars rolled down a steep embankment.

Supt. Stemble took charge of the situation. The rescuers and injured suffered greatly from cold. A relief train from Rockford, carrying doctors and nurses, soon arrived. Most of the passengers in the chair cars were asleep when the wreck occurred, and a panic accompanied their efforts to get out of the overturned coaches.

Victims of Second Accident.

Some of the injured were taken to Rockford. Train No. 2, which brought several of the injured to Chicago, struck a horse and buggy at a crossing in Glen Ellyn, killing the horse and seriously injuring the driver, Mrs. Anna Zeigler.

KING OF BACHELORS HOOTED.

Denunciation of Church and Marriage Brings Bombardment on Part of His Auditors.

Forest City, Ia., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Clinton Herrick, so-called king of bachelors, in a speech today during a public meeting was hooted from the platform. Aged and feeble, the man who ruled the convention of old maids and bachelors years ago, and who was elected president of the national body then formed, has been humbled. For nearly an hour he denounced churches and his fellow men and present conditions as due to many ill advised marriages. Then the audience, disgusted, began with cat calls and ended in throwing anything available.

I., and took the original manuscript of sixty of the most celebrated operas and songs in American musical history. Mr. Marks has offered $500 reward for the return of the manuscript.

D. S. GEER SINKING SLOWLY.

Physicians Attending Chicago Attorney in Kalamazoo Hospital Now Regard His Recovery as Improbable.

Geer, 271 Oakwood boulevard, who has been confined in a hospital at Kalamazoo, Mich., for the last two weeks, was reported last night to be slowly sinking, and the physicians said he could not recover, although he may live several days longer. E. B. Leigh, a close friend and business associate of the stricken man, will arrive in Kalamazoo today with a Chicago specialist.

Proprietor Fined $50 for Violating Liquor Law and Gives Bond to Restrain Repeating Offense for a Year.

John E. Cornell, proprietor of the Hyde Park hotel, Lake avenue and Fifty-first street, was fined $50 and costs yesterday by Municipal Judge Maxwell in the Hyde Park court for violating the liquor law in a prohibition district. SLAP FOR DUNNE OVER W. L. FISHER

Transportation Committee Retains Traction Counsel to Advise Them.

LONG HAIRS ARE HOPEFUL

See Chance for Another City Hall Job; Mayor's Relative to Keep His Office.

The local transportation committee of the city council yesterday administered a sharp rebuke to Mayor Dunne for dispensing with the services of his special traction adviser, Walter L. Fisher.

When Ald. Milton J. Foreman introduced and moved for passage a resolution continuing the services of Mr. Fisher as adviser of the committee, regardless of Mayor Dunne's attitude in the matter, it was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Neither Mr. Fisher nor the mayor attended the meeting of the committee. The mayor was at his house on Bacon street picking flaws in the amendments to the traction ordinance passed by the council early Tuesday morning and preparing a veto message, said to be of record breaking length. He also was awaiting a stock opinion from the corporation counsel's office to fit the form of the veto. Mr. Fisher remained away, presumably from motives of delicacy.

The resolution offered by Ald. Foreman was the only business before the committee, Chairman Werno handed the draft to Ald. Linn H. Young, who read it aloud. The vote in its favor was unanimous and the committee adjourned.

Text of the Resolution.

The text of the resolution follows:

Whereas, In April, 1906, Walter L. Fisher was retained by Mayor Dunne as his personal traction counsel; and

Whereas, Shortly thereafter Mr. Fisher was requested by the committee on local transportation to act as its counsel in the matter of the negotiations for the settlement of the street car question, in addition to his duties as the mayor's personal traction adviser; and

Whereas, On the 6th day of February, 1907, Mr. Fisher tendered his resignation to the mayor as his special traction counsel, which resignation was accepted; and

Whereas, It is desirable that Mr. Fisher's services be retained by the committee on local transportation until the work performed by him for and on behalf of the committee is finally disposed of, including the litigation on the Mueller law now pending before the Supreme court of Illinois; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the committee on local transportation of the city council of the City of Chicago, that Walter L. Fisher be and he is hereby retained as special counsel for the committee on local transportation to perform such duties as may be from time to time assigned to him by said committee, including such matters as may hereafter arise in connection with the pending litigation involving the validity of the Mueller law before the Supreme court of the state of Illinois; and be it further

Resolved, That the finance committee be and it is hereby requested to make provision in the next appropriation bill for his compensation.

Fisher Gratified at Vote.

Mr. Fisher beamed with quiet satisfaction when told of the action of the committee.

"I have nothing to say beyond the fact that I am much gratified that the committee has enough confidence in my ability to retain my services," he said.

In respect to the decision in the Mueller certificate case, Mr. Fisher said he expected it to be handed down either the latter part of the present month or in April.

Ald. Dever, Finn, and Zimmer professed to believe that the affair was a tempest in a teapot.

"I concede Mr. Fisher's ability," said Ald. Dever. "If the local transportation committee cannot get along without him, it ought to have him."

"It would be a calamity to lose Mr. Fisher's services at this time," said Ald. Maypole, a democrat.

So far as the services of Attorney Samuel Adams, another of the mayor's advisers, and the services of Daniel P. Murphy, the mayor's brother-in-law, are concerned, Corporation Counsel James Hamilton Lewis stated that he may recommend the retention of Mr. Adams. There have not been any rumors to the effect that the mayor's brother-in-law is to be dismissed.

Dunne Hunts for Flaws.

The first printed copies of the amended ordinances reached the mayor at noon, and he hurried away to the north side to pick flaws in them. It was reported that Willie Sullivan, the mayor's stenographer, had been summoned to the north side, also to help in the drafting of the veto message.

Before the mayor left the city hall he talked with Col. Lewis respecting the legal aspects of the referendum question. Col. Lewis handed out some verbal advice, which the mayor requested him to put in writing. This opinion is to be delivered on Saturday, when the mayor will try it on and see how it fits.

"I expect to begin drafting my message to the council this afternoon," he said, when asked to detail his plans. "In regard to Mr. Fisher, I have nothing to say. Mr. Fisher saw fit to leave my employ, and that is all there is to it."

The mayor refused to discuss the appointment of a possible successor for Mr. Fisher, beyond denying that he has sounded former Supreme Court Justice Magruder on the subject.

Among the "long hairs" there was rejoicing because of the departure of Mr. Fisher. They thought it looked like an opening for another job in the city hall.

To Hear Petition Complaints.

The election board prepared for the hearing of complaints against the referendum petition, which is set for 2 o'clock this afternoon. A lively session may result.

Chairman William A. Bond of the committee appointed by the real estate board to support the ordinances announced a meeting to be held in the real estate board rooms at noon today. The disposition of the real estate men is to "fight to a finish."

Although embryonic as yet, a plan is understood to be on foot for the purpose of calling upon other organizations of business men, including clubs, to aid in a unified campaign against Dunneism so far as traction matters are concerned.

"This committee is purely nonpartisan and does not intend to interfere with the mayoralty campaign," said Chairman Bond. "Its purpose is to hasten the settlement of the traction question."

"Yes, we want the traction question settled," said W. D. Kerfoot, a democratic member of the committee, with heartiness.

New Company in Session.

An informal meeting of the newly chosen directors of the Chicago Railways company met yesterday in the offices of Attorney W. W. Gurley.

Mr. Gurley said he expects to receive back the reorganization papers from New York today. Then the work of assuming control over the traction properties will be pushed in earnest.

1907 Stearns

"THE BEST AUTOMOBILE"

WHY is the Stearns 1907 model "the best automobile"? Because the Stearns factory pays many times more for material than is usual in the average good car; because they buy this material from the world's market, not limiting themselves to any particular country or city. The best is what they are looking for, and the best is what they buy. They can, for this reason, honestly claim that no car from any country contains one single part of better material than is used in the Stearns 1907. Their methods of construction take time, brains and money, but produce the best beyond all argument.

THE GAMBLERS' TRAIN.

The Illinois Central railroad cannot afford to defy public sentiment by continuing to run the gamblers' train when there is a determined effort being made by the authorities to put a stop to a business which is contrary to the law. There are difficulties connected with the suppression of that form of gambling which has been carried on upon a vessel which seeks to avoid state laws by trying to keep out of the reach of the authorities of several states in the jurisdiction of one or the other of which it must be at a given time. Such difficulties do not justify the deliberate running of trains for the special accommodation of men who wish to gamble on that vessel.

It may be possible that the state's attorney has not taken the matter up with the right officials. A division superintendent may hesitate to give an order which will result in a diminution of the passenger receipts. To him a dollar may be a dollar no matter what its origin, his business being to make as much money as possible for his company. In permitting an advertisement of trains in a daily racing announcement, and in arranging for trains whose business is understood by every one, he may be strictly within the line of his duty as he sees it.

There are higher officials of the company, however, to whom other considerations should appeal. The authorities have not hesitated to break down doors and tear out telephone equipment known to be used in furthering unlawful business. It is hard to see where the gamblers' trains differ in principle from the telephones. The most discouraging feature of every struggle to uphold the law is the fact that people of respectability are willing to aid in the breaking of the law as long as they are not found out or as long as they can keep out of the reach of punishment. It is not creditable to the Illinois Central railroad that its officials are willing to lend assistance to the lawbreakers against whom the state's attorney is making his fight. Particularly is this true when so many interests are working together to remove what is counted a menace to society.

It is useless to try to suppress entirely the minor forms of gambling, which are relatively unobtrusive in their operation when a much patronized railroad company deliberately defies public sentiment and the efforts of the legal representatives of the people to uphold the dignity of the law. If the bookmaker or his victim is to be punished for his part in the game equal justice demands that others who aid and abet violation of the law should suffer also.

ENTOMOLOGY AND BUG HUNTING

In consideration of the "constant drain on plant life by the depredations of insects" it has been proposed that an appropriation of $25,000 a year shall be made available for the work of the state entomologist, to be expended in the line of investigation, publication, and field demonstration. This sum is not quite six times the amount already allowed for carrying on a work proclaimed of the highest importance.

A few years ago, before bug hunting and insect investigation had attained in the popular mind the distinction of entomology, this proposition would not have agreeably impressed the people of Illinois. Up to the present time an appropriation of nearly $5,000 has been considered sufficient for such publication and investigation as are necessary for the exposure of the malevolent plans of insects and the discomfiture thereof. But it appears that bugs have multiplied and their depredations have correspondingly increased, and not only the chief entomologist but many assistant entomologists are working overtime in an effort to keep pace with the new devices sprung by bugs against the peace and dignity of the commonwealth. Corn is constantly threatened, fruit trees are devastated, shade trees are shorn of their glory, clover and alfalfa are easy victims, and other bugs conspire successfully against other industries.

Men take insects more seriously than they used to. The mosquito is recognized as the wanton transmitter of yellow fever. The common housefly is frequently detected in the act of spreading malignant disease by the general nature of his attentions. And within a fortnight a learned scientist, possibly an entomologist, has proclaimed that a dog, the pet of a stricken household, imparts his fleas to another dog, which in turn contributes them to his master's family, thereby introducing into an unsuspecting neighborhood the germs of malignant disease. Hence it is plain that the flea must be reckoned with as an element of peril in the calculations of all students of entomology.

Since it is apparent that insect life is profiting by the general era of prosperity the state entomologist, apart from all consideration of the ponderous dignity of his title, becomes an object of peculiar interest. There is no doubt that he will easily expend $25,000 a year in the preparation of printed matter and in glorious field strife with the increasing enemies of the crops. If a distinguishing appellation of greater solemnity could be granted it would fittingly accompany the majesty of an increased appropriation.

IT IS TIME TO CRY "HALT."

The judiciary committees of the senate and house are unanimously of the opinion that congress is powerless to regulate woman and child labor in the states. If there be abuses their abolition must be left to the states. The authority of congress to regulate commerce between the states cannot, it is held, be so stretched as to warrant encroachments on the police power of the states. "The national government," says the house committee, "is too weak to undertake the exercise of the police power of the state." If it were to attempt to root out objectionable local conditions found in this, that, and the other state, it would soon have so much on its hands that it would be unable to attend properly to its legitimate business.

The house committee, going beyond the single question of child labor, says that "under the constitution congress is powerless to control or regulate the manufacture of products for interstate commerce, shipment, or business." It invites attention to the decision of the Supreme court that manufacture is not commerce and is, therefore, outside the field of congressional regulation. It is manifest that the committee sees no merit in the proposition supported by President Roosevelt that corporations engaged in the manufacture of goods which may enter into interstate commerce shall be compelled to take out national licenses.

There has been a marked determination of late in some quarters to amplify the powers of the general government at the expense of those of the states. Men shocked by real or imaginary ills and impatient to put an immediate end to them have sought to extend the jurisdiction of the national government. They have attempted to make of the power to regulate interstate commerce an India rubber power under which congress could enter the mills and factories of the states and regulate the workers and the methods of the manufacturers.

It was time for a protest against violent treatment of the constitution. It was time to call attention to the fact that there are certain fields of activity which are reserved for the states and which the national government cannot invade even with the most beneficent intentions. As regards the child labor question, if the states are derelict the general government may investigate and may express its disapproval of objectionable conditions, but it cannot enter a state to remedy them until the constitution shall be amended. There are reformers who are so impetuous that they will not resort to that slow process and seek to attain their aim by putting forced and improper constructions upon the language of the constitution. If they were to be successful they might do a little good here and there, but they would "nullify the great work of the framers of the constitution and leave the state governments mere matters of form devoid of power."

SOME CONSEQUENCES OF HUMOR.

No legal excuse can be made for the Italian workman in New York who turned suddenly on a party of men who had been bantering and shoving him and, discharging his revolver, killed one of his persecutors and wounded another. Even emotional insanity, the mainstay of many a murderer's defense, is hardly applicable to a man who goes home, arms himself, and returns to the scene of his troubles. What the defense may be is not to be considered at this time.

But the tragedy carries, or should carry, a potent lesson for a large number of humorous individuals who frequently fail to comprehend that what is an excellent joke to them may not be so excruciatingly funny to the victim of the pleasantry. The trouble with many practical jokes is that the perpetrators have not exercised sufficient discretion in picking out the subjects of their horseplay, and that the point of the joke is entirely lost on the person who is not in a jovially receptive mood for unpleasant familiarity. Especially is this true of a man of violent passions, of quick temper and revengeful spirit, and while such a man may be of no particular advantage to the community, and is really in need of proper instruction, he is not the man to select as the butt of ridicule or of boisterous tactics, however good natured.

It is altogether probable that if men would curb their humorous propensities, confine their fun to more rational expositions, or would be more discreet in choosing the object of their hilarious attentions, the number of homicides would be materially decreased. It is unfortunate that some men have violent tempers and that some dogs are dangerously savage, but with both men and dogs it is advisable to take their infirmities into account and allow for their inability to grasp the subtlety of the joke. An ill tempered man has no right to demand special privileges because he cannot control his passions, but the question deals not with his rights but with the discretion or folly of those who expose themselves to his fury.

The most successful humorist is he who employs thought and skill in the selection of those on whom to exercise his humor. The boy who esteems it a capital joke to throw a stone into a nest of yellow jackets knows that he is inviting trouble. So the jovial person who persists in plaguing a man of passions, and with a revolver to emphasize them, courts a fate wholly disproportionate to the offense. Morally, the humorist is not irresponsible if in a promiscuous shooting that follows the innocent bystander is a victim. To be "as funny as I can" in a way that is almost sure to precipitate disastrous consequences shows a sad perversion of the real mission of humor. What is fun for the boys is not always death to the frog.

CONFISCATING THE ANTHRACITE.

Admiral Evans' article in the North American Review advocating the acquisition of all anthracite coal mines in the country by the government is an instance of the lengths to which the country must accustom itself to think of going if it is ever to be supreme upon the sea. The argument is in brief that there is no fuel equal to anthracite coal for the use of warships on account of its freedom from smoke, and that under present conditions the anthracite coal in the United States will be exhausted in fifty years unless the consumption of it by private citizens is stopped.

The use of oil, which is also smokeless, is considered inadvisable because there can be no such thing as added speed obtained by forced draft. It is evident also that a large bulk of oil in the heart of a fighting machine is much more dangerous than a mass of coal when exposed to the shots of the enemy. There is at present some difficulty in getting oil of the required quality in different ports of the world, although this difficulty could be met by establishing oil depots instead of coaling stations. But considering the other objections to the use of oil it will be unnecessary to take the trouble to arrange for this.

Accepting Admiral Evans' statement of the advantage of anthracite coal, the only question to consider is whether the need of the nation is so great as to compensate for the disturbance of business caused by the withdrawal of anthracite from the market. A legal way could be found to acquire the fields if desirable, but would it be advisable? It is estimated that the coal in sight will last fifty years. It is at least possible that within fifty years new ways will be found to create, store, or convey electricity, or to consume bituminous coal without smoke, or perhaps some new source of power may be discovered and adapted to the use of the navy. Fifty years is a long time to look ahead in an age when inventions succeed each other so rapidly. It is more than likely that the anthracite beds will be found to be more extensive than it is yet possible to prove. In any case the closing of the anthracite mines to the public and the restriction of the output to the needs of the navy would depopulate many towns. It would cause an upheaval in millions of homes where the cleanly, steady, slow burning hard coal fire adds to the enjoyment of life. It would upset many industries. It would be a big price to pay for the advantage of possessing a navy using a unique fuel.

The government would be wise to accumulate a large stock of anthracite. It might go so far as to forbid the exportation of anthracite except for the use of the navy, but neither the people of the state of Pennsylvania nor the users of anthracite throughout the country are likely to approve Admiral Evans' project.

HEREUPON Dr. Fisher may resume his regular practice.

IN order to retain their connection with the pay roll Mayor Dunne's advisers must advise him to do whatever he likes.

THE patient citizen is beginning to think that eternal snow shoveling is the price of clean sidewalks.

IT is highly probable that at the end of his present term Mayor Dunne will feel considerably "relieved."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT probably did not say at the Gridiron club dinner that all senators looked like Forakers to him.

IT is due to the rock of Gibraltar to state that it is still doing business at the old stand and has no intention of retiring on account of poor health.

CALIFORNIA cities are afflicted with fleas, and New Orleans is preparing for its annual campaign against mosquitoes. There are worse things than snow.

MR. JEROME was unfortunate in stirring up a witness who distinctly remembered having taken a drink with him.

THE retirement of Mr. Dryden, however, will make an improvement in the average health of the senate.

A FAINT idea of what this trial will cost Mr. Thaw may be gathered by glancing at his list of lawyers.

MRS. PARKER tells the Arché club that men have proved themselves incompetent to run the city and that a woman ought to be in charge of the mayor's office. Does not Mrs. Parker lose sight of the magnificent manner in which Deputy Assistant Mayor Margaret Haley is almost running the city?

FURTHERMORE, there are wild, hoarse, alarming rumors that Col. J. Ham Lewis may divorce himself from the administration on the ground of incompatibility.

SEVERAL citizens are believed to have made a solemn vow not to take another trip on the lake until the ice crop has been harvested.

IF there are any other ways of increasing the educational muddle Mayor Dunne's school board will find them out.

AND Mayor Dunne is doing all this herculean work for the mere pittance of $10,000 a year!

PERHAPS the average citizen does not realize how hard the men are laboring at the intakes in order that the flow of water through the faucet of his kitchen sink may be free and unobstructed.

His honor also feels that his "duty to the people" compels him to give them every possible encouragement to vote for him again next spring.

"MAYOR DUNNE," says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "will run for reëlection on a sweet by and by platform." The choir will please sing, "Shall We Gather at Salt River?"

IN A MINOR KEY.

Technical Knowledge Needed.

"There is one thing I'd like to ask you," said the victim, after the footpad had relieved him of his portable property. "First, though, have you any kick to make as to the amount of stuff you have found on me?"

"No," answered the footpad.

"It was about all you expected from a man of my general appearance, was it?"

"Yes. What are you drivin' at?"

"Well, this is the third time I've been held up, and I begin to suspect that I carry more loose change about me than is really necessary. What I want to know is this: What is the smallest amount a man can carry in his pockets and yet be sure of not being beat up for having too little when some fellow like you goes through him?"

But the highwayman stiffly refused to give him the information. It would have been giving away one of the secrets of his trade.

Cynical.

"Permit me to ask you, madam," said the lawyer, who was a friend of the family, "your real reason for wanting a divorce from your husband?"

"He isn't the man I thought I was marrying," explained the fair caller.

"My dear madam," rejoined the lawyer, "the application of that principle would break up every home in the country."

Uncle Allen.

"No man," said Uncle Allen Sparks, "can be absolutely square in this world, and stay square, without watching his corners all the time."

More About Them.

Little Willie one day tore
All the clothes off Theodore.
Gleefully he shouted, "There!
Now you're just a Teddy bare!"
—Harper's Weekly

Teddy then grabbed Bobby Beck;
Tied a sausage round his neck.
"There!" he said, "I really think
You are just a Bob o' link!"

In a Quandary.

"You are serving pure food now, aren't you?"

Thus spoke the regular customer.

"Why do you think so?" asked the proprietor of the restaurant.

"Because you have raised your prices."

"Huh!" exclaimed the proprietor, "that's no—"

Then he stopped precipitately.

He couldn't answer the question either way without making a damaging admission.

So he merely shrugged his shoulders and passed on. C. W. T.

LETTER OF MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

Copyright: 1907: By the Marquise de Fontenoy.

GEN. KOUROPATKIN'S history of the war with Japan, now published and on sale in Russia, is but an incomplete and unsatisfactory version of the original manuscript. The latter was stolen in part, while the remainder was secretly transcribed unbeknown to the general, and from this material a full version of the book, unedited and unbowdlerized, has been printed in Switzerland by the agents of the socialist revolutionary party. It consists of about 800 pages of close print, and, having been written by the general from his note books immediately after his return from the seat of war, when he was imbittered by the attitude of the imperial family and of the stay-at-home generals and officials toward him, contains an unvarnished and unsparing account of the entire operations. He shows therein how cruelly he was handicapped by the lack of discipline among his field officers, by the want of preparation, and by the difficulty of obtaining the requisite war material and supplies; while he pays full tribute to the courage, the patience, and the devotion of the subaltern officers and of the rank and file under his command.

Kouropatkin, who was generalissimo throughout the greater portion of the war, is, according to the leading military authorities of the old world, one of the most able commanders and clever organizers of Europe and is considered to have accomplished wonders in the face of the most insuperable obstacles. His record of the war, therefore, as published by the revolutionary party, constitutes an invaluable document from a military point of view, and should find a place in every foreign war department and war college.

On discovering the theft of half the original manuscript and the manner in which the remainder had been transcribed, Kouropatkin, who by that time had reached a more equable frame of mind, sat down to rewrite almost the entire book, toning down or eliminating the most harsh of his criticisms, yielding, it is said, in the matter to an urgent request from the czar. His compliance with the emperor's views in the matter has led to his being restored to favor, and he has recently had a number of audiences and is about to be appointed to the viceroyalty of the Caucasus.

Sir Archibald Napier, whose death has just taken place in London, was the head of one of the junior branches of that great Scottish house of Napier which has for its chief Lord Napier of Ettrick. The patronymic is said to be derived from an expression of King David II. of Scotland, who at the close of a battle, in complimenting the Lennox men, led by Donald, second son of the earl of Lennox, declared that they had all done valiantly, but that there was one of them—namely: their chief—who had "nae pier" (no peer). It is from this Donald, second son of the earl of Lennox, and thus surnamed by the king "Napier," that the Napiers trace their descent.

The Napiers are a numerous family and include, besides Lord Napier and Ettrick, another peer—namely: Lord Napier of Magdala. Then there is a Sir William Lennox Napier, who is indebted for his baronetcy to the fact that his grandfather, Sir Joseph Napier, was lord chancellor of Ireland, while the baronetcy of the late Sir Archibald Napier, who has just died, was created as far back as 1627. The founder of the branch of the Napiers to which the late Sir Archibald belonged was the John Napier of Merchiston, the inventor of logarithms, who flourished in the reign of Mary queen of Scots.

Sir Archibald was somewhat unfortunate in his marriage and three years ago was obliged to seek a divorce, the case exciting a good deal of confusion owing to the fact that there are about six women entitled to style themselves Lady Napier. The Lady Napier who was the respondent in this particular case is a sister of Sir Andrew Fairbairn. The latter is a deaf mute, an affliction which does not, however, prevent him from having a keen sense of humor and being a delightfully accomplished and erudite man. Some time ago he was invited by a friend to dine at the Reform club with two other men, each of whom had been told that he would meet Sir Andrew and had been warned of his affliction. Sir Andrew, arriving rather late at the club in company with his host, found his two fellow guests laboriously talking to one another with their fingers by means of the sign language, each imagining that the other was the deaf and dumb baronet.

King Victor Emmanuel has just lost a cousin by the death of old Joseph Saracco, who it is true was not a blood relation, but who was indebted for his titular kinsmanship to the sovereign to the fact that he was one of the few nonroyal knights of the Italian Order of the Annunciation, all of whom rank as cousins of the monarch. He was one of the most curious figures of political life in Italy. Piedmontese by birth, he possessed the Piedmontese qualities of sterling honesty, financial astuteness, and economy. The latter, indeed, was carried to such a pitch that when he was appointed premier the comic papers represented him as bargaining for twenty 1 cent glasses of lemonade, with which to enable his friends to drink to the success of his administration. He was one of the oldest veterans of public life in Italy, having entered parliament in 1849.

At one moment, when the Italian cities and towns were vying with one another in erecting ugly but costly monuments to Cavour, the citizens of Acqui thought it their duty to place a suitable monument to the father of Italian unity on the central square of their town. Mayor Saracco yielded with reluctance to their importunities, but in order not to disturb the finances of the municipality he ransacked the studios of half the sculptors in the kingdom and finally picked up for a mere nothing an old forgotten and discarded statue of Cavour. This he transferred to Acqui and had it erected on the public square. His fellow townsmen thereupon decided to celebrate the inauguration of the monument with great festivities, the cost of which the municipal treasury was expected to defray. But Mayor Saracco, again trembling for the municipal finances, got up early one morning at daybreak and, with the assistance of a few municipal employés, unveiled and inaugurated the monument before the town was awake.

At the time of the death of the venerable ex-queen of Hanover the other day the opinion was expressed that her demise would result in a renunciation by her son, the duke of Cumberland, of his pretensions to the crown of Hanover, and that in this way all obstacles would be removed to his taking possession of the throne of the duchy of Brunswick. The late queen was always looked upon as constituting the chief obstacle to any definite understanding between the duke and the Prussian government.

It would now appear, however, as if the demise of the queen, far from facilitating any compromise, has had the effect of rendering a reconciliation between Berlin and Gmunden still more difficult than before. For her funeral led to a most remarkable demonstration of affectionate remembrance on the part of the people of Hanover. There was scarcely a town in the former kingdom, or a church, or a public institution which did not send representatives, while almost every one of the houses of the Hanoverian aristocracy was represented by one or more of its members, who took it in turns to act as a guard of honor to the remains during the forty-eight hours that preceded the entombment.

While all these demonstrations of regard for the late queen were personal rather than political and did not really constitute in any sense a political manifestation against the Prussian crown, yet on the other hand the duke feels that it would be singularly improper for him to choose this moment of all others, when his house has just received so many tokens of affection from the people of Hanover, to announce that he has abandoned all his hopes in connection with the Hanoverian throne, and that he has been willing to purchase the possession of the crown of Brunswick by the sacrifice of all his Hanoverian friends and adherents.

This is understood at Berlin, where the authorities have also correctly appreciated the attitude of the people of Hanover. In fact, Emperor William, far from placing any obstacles or expressing any disapproval thereof, may be said to have inaugurated it by personally giving orders for the closing of the court theater at Hanover and for the display of signs of mourning at the various public institutions, especially those owing their existence to the creation and endowment of the late queen.

THREE TREATIES OF IMPORTANCE NEARING THE SIGNATURE STAGE.

Administration Hopes Conventions with Santo Domingo, Germany, and Japan Will Be Signed Within the Next Few Weeks.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Within the next few weeks it is the expectation of the administration that three treaties of great importance will be signed by the United States and foreign countries. The first to receive the signatures of the plenipotentiaries will be that authorizing the United States to continue its policy of collecting the customs of Santo Domingo. The second will deal with the Japanese controversy and the third with the trade relations of the United States and Germany.

There is no longer any doubt that the first two treaties will have to be acted upon at an extra session of the senate, and the last will have to go over for consideration during the next regular session of congress for the reason that it will require action by both houses.

The state department was notified a few days ago that the American commissioners who have been in conference for several months in Berlin with the German commissioners sailed Jan. 30 for New York. This commission did not have plenipotentiary powers and consequently signed no treaty or agreement. What it did was to reach an agreement on all points of commercial dispute between the United States and Germany and to embody this solution in a formal report to the president.

German Tariff Treaty Important.

The views of the commission will be of especial importance to Chicago and the west, because much of the discussion was devoted to a modification of the harsh regulations respecting the admission of American live stock and food products into the German empire. The president intends to send this report to congress for its information, and if he approves it, will seek authority for negotiation of a treaty with Germany along the lines it indicates. It is extremely doubtful, however, that the treaty will be in shape for signature for some time, and in any event it could not be effective through senate action alone.

Under the precedent established in the case of the reciprocity treaty with Cuba, the house must vote in favor of a convention in addition to the senate in order to put it into force. One effect of the favorable reception of the commission's report will be to cause Germany to extend the life of the reciprocity agreement, which will expire on June 30 next. This agreement extends to the United States the minimum German tariff, save on a few products, including those upon which Norway and Sweden are given lower rates.

Dominican Treaty in Doubt.

Although Minister Dawson has negotiated a treaty with the Dominican republic to take the place of the one pending in the senate, he has been unable for some reason or other to get a responsible official of the government to sign it. Secretary Root expects any day to be apprised that the treaty has been signed and that Mr. Dawson has left by man of war for this country. Mr. Dawson cannot possibly reach Washington before Feb. 20, even if the treaty be acted upon without delay, and this would leave only nine legislative days for the senate to consider it.

While Senator Morgan has abandoned his opposition to the Dominican policy of the administration, Senator Bacon has declared he will fight it to the bitter end, and he was in consultation today with Senator Culberson and other democratic leaders, as a result of which a decision was reached to throw upon the shoulders of the republican senators the entire burden of ratification. Without the support of the four democrats the treaty cannot be ratified during the present session, even if Senator Bacon should agree not to debate it.

During the discussion of the matter by the democratic leaders today it was decided not to delay action during the special session of the senate. It is appreciated that the republican majority will be greater than the two-thirds necessary to ratify and it would be futile and a waste of time to delay ratification by debate. The new treaty will appeal to the republicans as a more prudent convention to adopt than the treaty now pending, as it relieves the United States of all responsibility in connection with the settlement of claims held against the Dominican government.

Japanese Situation Unsettled.

The exchanges which have occurred thus far between the United States and Japan regarding the questions pending between them have been of an entirely verbal character and nothing has been reduced to writing up to this time. The president feels he could not now approach Japan with a request for the signature of the treaty until the San Francisco school question is settled. The two governments are in perfect accord, however, and it will be an easy matter to negotiate and sign the treaty just as soon as the president has arranged for the admission of Japanese children in San Francisco to the public schools of that city. It is the expectation of the administration that representatives of San Francisco will agree to admit Japanese to their schools after the president has explained to them the reasons why he asks this concession.

There is no question that the president has been embarrassed by the views expressed by ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney in the letter the latter wrote to Representative McCall of Massachusetts. This letter took the ground that the federal government had no right to interfere in the policy of the state with respect to its schools, nor had the Japanese any basis in the treaty of 1894 for the demand for admission of their children to San Francisco schools. The president is apprehensive that this opinion may stiffen the backs of San Franciscans, although this is not anticipated by California congressmen.

Frisco's Action Awaited.

The moment the San Francisco authorities agree to remove the restrictions against the Japanese, Secretary Root will negotiate a new treaty with Japan, under which there will be reciprocal exclusion of laborers by the two countries. Even if this treaty be submitted within the next ten days, the quickest time in which it possibly can be negotiated, there cannot be action because some of the western senators have announced their intention to discuss the question, and democrats following the lead of Mr. Olney will endeavor to make political capital out of the proposal of the administration to have American laboring men excluded from a foreign country.

These tactics are not likely to be productive of anything of value, as it has developed that in California the laboring men themselves proposed to President Roosevelt the solution which he has suggested to Japan. In any event this treaty will have to go over for action during the extra session.

Celestial Fashions.

The appearance of the comet was such that the sensitive Pleiades were shocked.

"How disordered you look!" they exclaimed. "Do stop and let us fix your hair."

"Don't touch me!" returned the comet, breathlessly. "This is the automobile tousle."

THE "BLESSED END OF 'SALOME'."

[By W. J. Henderson in the New York Sun.]

The final disposition of Mr. Strauss' operatic offal has removed a stench from the nostrils of a great many decent people. It has also greatly disappointed that curious breed of humans that always hover like vultures over decaying matter. That the Metropolitan opera house would Thursday morning last have contained hundreds of persons who had never before darkened its doors, persons to whom the music of Strauss would have been an unspeakable torture, goes without question. The disappointment of these people is sad, but possibly that was one thing for which the scourers of the Augean stable were working.

Meanwhile it is open to calm observers to note the singular combination of stupidity and shrewdness displayed by those who were interested in presenting to this public this masterpiece of obscenity. The stupidity of the venders of the Strauss concoction is disclosed in their solemn pretense that they are actuated by the highest reverence for the sacred name of art.

Did they really believe that this fooled any one? If they did have a regard for art and were not moved by any desire to excite a nasty curiosity to see something unclean why did they so carefully seize upon every opportunity to emphasize the doubtful parts of the drama? It was by doing this that they invoked the stern rebuke which met them. After it was too late they began to tell the newspapers how they would modify the offensive parts of the performance. But they did not tell how they could change the foul and abnormal motive on which the action of the play is based.

Richard Strauss understood that motive and gave the fullness of his unquestioned skill to its musical embodiment. He has never craned at any small physical fence. He has never regarded art as a lofty or ennobling thing. When he wrote "Death and Transfiguration" he made no hesitation about composing a musical imitation of the struggles of a dying man, his gasps, his agonies, his death rattle. He indulged in crass realism, the baldest and most unimaginative tone painting, in this work, and he followed similar processes of composition when he wrote "Ein Heldenleben" and the silly and cheaply sensational "Symphonia Domestica."

When he set out to compose his first opera he frankly sought for an unclean topic and found it in "Feuersnoth." That there is a certain lewd humor in this story cannot be denied, but it is not seemly for men and women to talk to one another about the plot.

It is all very well to say that operagoers do not concern themselves with the stories of the operas, but that is not true. It used to be true twenty-five or thirty years ago, but since the rise to popularity of the Wagner music drama it is true no longer. The operagoing public of today wishes to know what is happening on the stage.

It is pretty safe to say that when Richard Strauss turned to look for a second opera book he desired one which would be even more radical than "Feuersnoth." In the drama of Oscar Wilde he found it. Probably a dozen years hence we shall all look back with wonder at the Oscar Wilde movement of the present. The forcing into world wide prominence of a poet who was, at his best, a feeble echo of Keats and Shelley and a dramatist whose most significant achievement is a watery copy of Maeterlinck is one of the singular phenomena of an empty period. Strauss has done more for Wilde than Wilde for Strauss, but they were perfectly mated; two souls with but a nasty thought, two pens that drool as one.

Doubtless Mr. Strauss saturates himself in the spirit of Bach and Beethoven and bows before the statue of Wagner when he sits down to compose. But his contracts are models of financial skill. A master technician of orchestral combinations, he knows also how to orchestrate a bank account. Creator of carnal visions in three-fourth time, he is also a dreamer of dollars, florins, reichsmarks, francs. Everywhere he sees them. Everywhere he gets them.

He may have heard a high and holy call to study the concupiscence of Salome and the flabby figure of the debauched Herod and set these personages in the gallery of operatic portraits beside Tristan and Isolde, Siegmund and Sieglinde, Semiramis and Arsace. Perhaps art sat upon her chaste throne and beckoned to him to do all this, but there was money in it. If art had asked him to be poor but honest mayhap he would have done her bidding, but there is room for doubt.

Mr. Strauss stands convicted at the bar of public opinion of having found his inspiration in a low subject and having exhausted upon the expression of an abnormal passion the riches of the greatest musical mastership now extant. If this be art, then let the music of the future find her mission in sewer, pesthouse, and brothel.

So much for the master. Now for the men. They attempted to distract public attention from the real issue in the case—namely, the filthy motive of the drama—to certain pictorial incidents. Very good. Let us take them at their own rating. They were going to modify the dance before Herod.

As a simple matter of fact, the dance executed in the performance of the opera was about as much like what the dance of the seven veils ought to be as it was like the sacred dance of the priestesses in the temple of "Aida." At the dress rehearsal of the opera on the Sunday preceding its public performance there was exhibited in all its details what is vaguely described as the body dance.

This dance was performed in a striking manner. It appears that some one feared that it might be too striking. Accordingly at the first public performance of the opera it was greatly modified, though even then it was something more than faintly suggestive. As for the seven veils, they consisted of some shreds of chiffon loosely thrown around the dancer's torso and pulled off one at a time as she danced. The manner in which they were put on and taken off gave hardly a hint of the meaning of the dance of the seven veils. As a matter of fact, these veils were treated as if they were a necessary evil, not a little in the way of a correct and impressive performance of the Midway dance.

The dance of the seven veils for which the stage directions call has its origin in the Assyrian poem of the "Descent of Istar." We have only a fragment of this work, but that fragment tells how Istar, the Venus of the Assyrian mythology, descended to Hades, where she was admitted according to the ancient rite of the place. She was obliged to pass through seven gates, at each of which a warder stripped from her some covering, till at the seventh was taken the last robe that shielded her form and she entered Hades naked.

A dance of the seven veils should center its fancy on the stripping of Istar, and such a dance can be made sufficiently suggestive even for the purposes of a Richard Strauss, and at the same time it can be done in a manner not necessarily offensive to a general audience. Furthermore, a dance of this character affords scope for poetic and graceful posturing, for pantomime of a fine type, and for a daintily conceived and dramatically developed action.

The dance of the seven veils ought to embody Salome's fascination of Herod by the gradual disclosure of more and more of her personal charms, but it need not go so far as to become offensive. Was any attempt made to give such a dance as this? Not the slightest. The seven veils were treated as seven nuisances, and the real purpose of the exhibition was to make an excuse of oriental realism for the introduction of a dance which was long ago relegated to the Bowery at Coney Island and there forbidden by the police.

We were next invited to consider the repentance of the authorities who in deference to public opinion and the imperative voice of the stockholders decided to modify the last scene of this prurient drama so that we should not have to see Salome kiss the lips of the severed head. It is needless at this moment to do more than to call attention to the fact that this is begging the question, because the action is still made known to us, and as the entire drama leads up to this we are hardly likely to forget what is going on just because we cannot see it.

The question to be asked here is, "Why did we ever see it?" The carefully illuminated presentation of this episode of the drama might have been set down to the lax stage management which prevails at the Metropolitan, but this thing had been rehearsed many times. There could not have been any mistake in the lighting of this scene. It must have been the intention to have the whole episode, including the kissing of the dead lips, plainly seen by the audience.

Now what is set forth in the delectable score of Mr. Strauss? Herod says to Herodias, "She is a monster, your daughter; I tell you she is a monster." To which Herodias replies, "My daughter has done just right. I shall stay here." Herod says, "There spoke my brother's wife. Come, I will not remain in this place. Come, I tell you. Surely something terrible will happen. We will hide ourselves in the palace. Herodias, I begin to be afraid." Over these last words is printed in the score: "Der Mond verschwindet"—"The moon vanishes."

All this time Salome is mooning over the bloody head, but she has not yet kissed the lips. Herod continues his speech, calling on his servants to put out the torches, "put out the moon, put out the stars. Something terrible will happen." After the words, "Verbergt die Sterne" ("Put out the stars"), the stage direction is "Es wird ganz dunkel"—"It grows entirely dark." After twelve bars in the score the voice of Salome enters with the words, "Ah, ich habe deinen Mund geküsst, Jochanaan!" "Ah, I have kissed thy mouth, Jokanaan!"

There can be no question about the intent of all this. The repulsive act of the abnormal girl was never intended to be thrust upon the sight of the audience. Strauss, with unerring genius for the stage, saw that the true Maeterlinckian effect would be reached by having the kiss given in the darkness. The shuddering horror of the concealed act, leaving something to the imagination, would be far more powerful in its effect than the bare nastiness of the scene as performed at the Metropolitan. Possibly if these truly artistic gentlemen who are at present in control of the Metropolitan had possessed a trifle of imagination they would have carried out the scene according to its plainly indicated spirit and thereby have eliminated at least one more cause of offense.

The simple ingenuousness of those who are pleading for this libidinous nightmare of Mr. Strauss is further published in their repeated assertion that in the end Salome's love becomes purified and glorified.

It is not part of the duty of the Sun's commentator on musical performances to enter into the merits of the action of the stockholders of the Metropolitan in causing the removal of this fester from the body operatic, but it is his privilege to express his gratitude for its disappearance. The report of the first performance of "Salome" made by him to the readers of this paper told of the marvelous technical skill displayed by Strauss in the creation of the orchestral tone picture of this drama. Of Strauss' mastery of the materials of his art there is no question. It may be that this man could if he would write a noble and normally human tragedy. The question to be answered is, Will he ever desire so to do? Is he an artistic pervert, who would rather find inspiration below than above? This cannot now be decided, for he has said that he intends to make an operatic version of the "Electra" of Sophocles or Euripides, or perhaps a fusion of both. In the treatment of this subject Mr. Strauss will find the opportunity to rehabilitate himself in the esteem of those who look for purity in art. Meanwhile he has the satisfaction of knowing that while Puritanism has so prevailed in wicked New York as to force his work off the stage, "Salome" is enjoying a career of great prosperity in Europe.

Mr. Strauss' consolations will be more substantial than those of Mr. Conried, whose illness and enforced absence from the opera house may possibly have some bearing on the mistakes made there. He will have the discomfort of reflecting that if the dance of the seven veils had been properly conceived and if the kissing of the head had been done in strict accord with the stage directions the inner nastiness of "Salome" might have escaped immediate discovery, and several profitable performances might have been given. In the end probably a demand for the removal of the thing from the Metropolitan would have emanated from the source from which it happily came in the beginning of things.

When all is said and done, a powerful and effective protest has been made against the exploitation on the stage of foul and unnatural human passions, against this degradation of music. It is not likely that the significance of the protest will escape the understanding of theatrical managers in general. The air will in all likelihood be clearer for some time to come.

TWO AUTO SHOWS LIKELY.

INDEPENDENTS AND LOCAL CLUB MAY GIVE EXHIBITIONS.

Dissension Among Manufacturers at the Display at the Coliseum Promises to Develop Into Separate Showings of Their Respective Machines Hereafter—Chicago Motorists Contemplate Arranging a Society Affair to Be Given Annually.

Chicago may have two automobile shows next year. In the first place, members of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' association, known as the "independents," will make every effort to break away from holding a show in conjunction with the "trust" manufacturers, and in this they may have the aid and comfort of the Chicago Automobile club.

It is more than possible that the club itself will organize a show which will include enthusiastic owners, each one of whom is willing to back his car against all comers, and the local dealers will be represented.

This last will be the important show from a society and local standpoint, as an effort will be made to hold it along horse show lines. That such a show is contemplated was admitted last night by Sidney S. Gorham, secretary of the Chicago Automobile club. It was discussed informally at a private dinner given by him at the Chicago Athletic club, and will be presented to the club directorate in a few weeks.

Split Averted This Year.

It was by a piece of smooth work on the part of those backing the Coliseum show that two displays were prevented this year. The show here is held under the auspices of the national association, which includes a few of the "independents" and nearly all the members of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, commonly referred to as the "trust." In New York each association held its show separately, and the "independents" had laid plans to hold their own here.

W. L. Andrews, in behalf of the "independents," secured an option last November on Brooke's Casino for the present week. About the time the option expired Mr. Andrews was called to New York and a man giving the name of L. L. Fest secured the hall and fixed the date for Wednesday night. When Mr. Andrews tried to close the deal he could not secure the hall for the entire week and the project had to be abandoned. Thus by the payment of $75 rent of the Casino for one night, those backing the Coliseum show defeated the scheme of the "independents," who then were compelled to pay $20 a foot for exhibit space in the Coliseum.

Warfare Is to Continue.

The "independents" held their annual meeting in the afternoon in the New Southern hotel. At its close Manager Alfred Reeves said:

"I don't see how we can do otherwise than hold the joint show next year. The Coliseum seems to be the only available hall, and the management is not unfriendly to us."

He admitted, however, that the warfare against the licensed manufacturers, operating under the Sheldon patent, is to be continued. This was evident when Benjamin Briscoe, Tarrytown, N. Y., one of the wealthiest automobile manufacturers in the country, and a known fighter, was literally forced to accept the chairmanship of the committee on management, from which James Cousens resigned. In this position Mr. Briscoe will have to direct the legal fight precipitated by the "trust" charging an infringement of the Sheldon patent.

The report of the president showed the membership has nearly doubled within the last year, and as an argument in behalf of a separate show here stated that the show in New York warranted a dividend of 65 per cent. Besides Mr. Briscoe, the following were chosen as committeemen: R. E. Olds, Lansing, Mich.; H. O. Smith, Indianapolis; and Roger J. Sullivan, Detroit.

Want Convicts to Make Roads.

The convicts in the Illinois penitentiary not only will crush the stone for country roads but see to its distribution as well, if the bill backed by the automobilists of the state is passed by the legislature. This bill will be introduced in the general assembly within two weeks, and the work of drafting it has been assigned to Sidney S. Gorham, secretary of the Chicago Automobile club. The need for such a law was decided upon at a private dinner given to the directors of the Illinois Association of Automobile Clubs by Mr. Gorham at the Chicago Athletic club.

NEW POLICE STATION WILL BE DEDICATED THIS EVENING.

Lieut. Max Heidelmeier to Wear Dress Suit as Toastmaster at the Hudson Avenue Quarters.

The new Hudson avenue police station, the first completed of the new stations sanctioned by the city council last spring, will be dedicated to police business tonight. As a fitting celebration of the gala event Lieut. Max Heidelmeier, "the burgomaster policeman," in charge of the precinct, has ordained that trumpets shall blare and effervescent beverages flow.

The "loot" has invited all the prominent business men of the precinct to the "blowout." Assistant Chief Schuettler, Inspector Revere, Capt. Barcal, and other police officials of more or less prominence will be among those present. Max will be toastmaster in a full dress.

The new station, which is the successor of the old Larrabee street station, is at Hudson avenue and Blackhawk street. It was built at a cost of $35,000. It is modern in every particular, having shower baths, reading rooms, and every convenience for the bluecoats.

PURE ICE CREAM IS PROMISED.

"We must give the people pure ice cream or quit the business," was the statement made last night by Edwin C. Eckhart, secretary of the Pennsylvania Ice Cream Manufacturers' association, in urging the passage of a resolution to obey the pure food law at the closing session last night of the National association, which was in convention in Chicago. The resolution was adopted.

The convention closed with a banquet in the evening in the main dining room of the hotel.

President—John T. Cunningham, Chicago.
Vice president—P. R. Walker, Warren, Pa.

Lord Charles Beresford of the British admiralty passed through Chicago last night on his way to El Paso, Tex., for the purpose of removing the body of his brother to England.

"I am going to Texas for the body of my brother, who recently died at El Paso," he told Clerk Gregory of the Grand Pacific hotel, where he stopped while waiting for his train over the Rock Island railroad last night.

Lord Charles would say nothing more regarding his brother's death, nor the claims of his alleged wife, or her share of the family estate.

CASEY, FRANK, 6152 Ingleside avenue, 24 years old; yardman for the Union Stockyards and Transit company; unmarried.

PENNERY, EDWIN A., 327 South Hermitage avenue, 50 years old and married; insurance solicitor.

Pennery was the tenth man chosen and the 198th venireman examined. At the close of the day's session John O. Brown was tendered to the state by the defense, and it is probable that he will be accepted this morning.

Swimming Tank for Jurors.

Judge Kavanagh introduced an additional innovation in criminal trials at the close of the session. He told the jurors arrangements had been made for the jurymen to make use of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium and swimming tank.

"I have confidence in you, and I want to make you feel that you are losing as little of your usual liberty as possible while serving on this jury," the court said. "Those of you who wish to go home may do so, with the understanding, of course, that you are not to talk to any one about this case."

At noon the jurymen were permitted to take a stroll in the park, accompanied by a deputy sheriff.

Both praise and censure were employed by Judge Kavanagh in his effort to establish a record in the matter of speedily selecting the jury. Among those commended by the court was Raleigh C. Griswell, an employé of Montgomery Ward & Co. Griswell passed a severe examination at the hands of the defense, Attorney Daniel C. Cruise being compelled to use a peremptory challenge to excuse him. Judge Kavanagh said:

"Mr. Griswell, you have given us an example of a good, clear-headed man. It is unusual for a judge to say such a thing, but after our experience here I want to commend you."

Former Union Man Excused.

Considerable amusement was caused by Thomas J. Kelly, who was examined by Assistant State's Attorney Miller. After Kelly said he formerly was a member of a labor union Mr. Miller asked him if he thought he could be a good juror for the state.

"Well, I'd give the union men a show," answered Kelly.

"Would you give a union man a better deal than any one else?" Judge Kavanagh asked.

"Well, you'd have to show me," said Kelly, causing laughter in the courtroom. He was excused.

Theodore Brinckmann, 12 Avers court, a "shade cutter" for the John V. Farwell company, declared his opinions were so fixed and immovable that nothing could change them.

"Have you always been that way?" asked Judge Kavanagh. Brinckmann said he had. He was excused.

The state has used up seventy-four peremptory challenges and the defense seventy-eight.

MUST NOT ELECT VIVA VOCE.

Attorney General of Wisconsin Declares Directors of Insurance Companies Must Be Chosen by Ballot.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 7.—Attorney General Gilbert handed down a decision today to the effect that the election of insurance directors by viva voce vote is illegal. They must be chosen by ballot.

PACIFIC OCEAN DECLARED TO BE THE MOON'S CRADLE.

Astronomer Pickering Says Water Fills the Cavity Caused by the Earth Ejecting Its Satellite.

The mystery of the man in the moon is solved. He is a son of old Mother Earth and originated in the Pacific ocean. Moreover, he was not made of green cheese.

A new theory of the moon's origin is given by Prof. William H. Pickering of the astronomy department of Harvard in an article, "The Place of the Origin of the Moon," in the current number of the Journal of Geology, issued yesterday from the University of Chicago press.

Prof. Pickering holds that the moon originated from the earth and that it must have left a "scar" upon the earth's surface. He believes the "scar" is to be detected in the Pacific ocean.

"We find a large mass of material now up in the sky, which it is generally believed by astronomers formed part of our earth," Prof. Pickering writes, "and the density of this material, after some compression by its own gravity, we find to be 3.4, or not far from that of the missing continents.

"From this we conclude that this mass of material formerly covered that part of the earth where the continents are lacking and which is now occupied by the Pacific ocean. In fact, there is no other place from which it could have come."

The scientist, after presenting a proof that the continents owe their origin to the departure of the moon from the earth, writes:

"If the moon had not been formed, or if it had carried away the whole of the terrestrial crust, our earth would have been completely enveloped by its oceans, as is presumably the case with Venus at present, and our race could hardly have advanced much beyond the intelligence of the present deep sea fish."

This theory of the moon's origin was put forth a few years ago by an English geologist.

THE ENGLISHMAN CAPTURES RACE.

Trotter's Horse in Clever Performance at City Park Beats Rather Royal.

FIVE FAVORITES WIN.

Result of Event Brings to Notice Suspension of Jockey Lloyd at Fair Grounds.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The winning of five favorites in a measure made up for the discomforts of a dreary off day at City park. The Mardi Gras visitors were more in evidence today, and their presence helped to swell the number up to something like the average for the winter.

The best performance of the day was that of The Englishman in the mile condition race, which had the feature place on the card. The Trotter horse won a clever race from company of his own kind, and in doing so again brought to notice the reported investigation of one bad race at the Fair Grounds last week. For that bad race Jockey Lloyd, one of the best of the light riders, was suspended pending an investigation. The question arises as to how that investigation is to be conducted while the officials who have it in charge are in Hot Springs and the principals to the case still in New Orleans. Meantime Lloyd is on the ground, and his absence from duty is being much felt by a number of horsemen who relied on him to do their riding.

The Englishman Easy Winner.

The Englishman race perhaps was the best betting affair of the week, for in the field of eight there were six widely touted good things, all of which were faithfully backed. It was a well contested race, too, and The Englishman was best. In the first half Hennessey was content to let him rate along in front with Devout, but at that stage of the journey he sent his mount to the front, and from there home it was a hopeless chase for the others. Rather Royal made a bold try on the stretch turn and Pasadena challenged at the eighth post, but both were shaken off.

Blue Lee, a castoff from the Burlew & O'Neill stable, after winning two straights for that stable, added another to his score by galloping away with the winner's end of the purse in the 2 year old race. He was a strong choice in the betting and at the finish was two lengths in front. Bucket Brigade, another of E. R. Bradley's good 2 year olds, landed second, and Truce a game third.

Ina Gray in the Fifth Event and Skyward in the Sixth, Each Quoted in the Betting at 20 to 1, Take Down Purses at Oaklawn—Jack Lory and Jake Saunders the Choices to Reward Backers—Eastern Plungers Lose Heavily.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Two long shots went through at Oaklawn today, when Ina Gray, in the third race, and Skyward, in the sixth, finished in front, after being quoted in the betting at 20 to 1. Form players had a bad day, only two favorites rewarding their backers. These were Jack Lory in the fourth event and Jake Saunders in the fifth.

THREATEN SPORT IN KENTUCKY.

Ministers Start Campaign to Have Anti-Racing Bill Passed by the State Legislature.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—An active campaign has been started by the ministers of Kentucky to have an anti-racing bill passed by the state legislature similar to the one just enacted by the legislature of Tennessee. The movement has received the active support of the ministers of Covington and Newport, Ky. In the latter city there is a poolroom, and as it has been running unhindered the preachers are determined if possible to put it and the race tracks out of business. As the legislature does not meet until next January it is expected the ministers will be thoroughly organized for the fight by that time.

ARRANGE FOR WHITE SOX TRIP.

President Comiskey to Announce Schedule of Exhibition Games of Training Season Within Day or Two.

President Comiskey of the White Sox announced yesterday that the slight hitch in routing the team for its spring training trip had been overcome, and he would have the details and schedule of exhibition games ready for final announcement within a day or two. There never has been any doubt as to the ultimate destination of the spring trip, but the choice of the trail and camping places along it has been delayed completing minor details.

President Murphy of the Chicago Nationals announced the signing of Jack McCormick to train the west side team again this year. Several applications from physical culture experts eager to succeed Jack have been received during the winter, but his success in handling the physical condition of the players last year precluded the chance of any change if Jack desired to continue the work.

Manager Griffith of the New York Highlanders spent the day calling on friends in the city, and left last night for the east to take charge of the club's training arrangements.

President Johnson of the American league returned to his office yesterday, and denied the reports of his serious sickness. He said he had been out of town on personal business, and, although still feeling the effects of his cold, feared no farther serious results from it.

CLARKE NOT TO QUIT PLAYING.

Pittsburg Outfielder Expected to Return to Old Position and Not Appear as Bench Manager.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—There appears to be a strong chance after all that when the Pittsburg team opens the season in April Manager Fred Clarke, instead of directing his nine from the bench, will be found at his old position in left field.

Ever since President Dreyfuss and his team leader came to terms at the National league meeting in New York it has been generally understood that Clarke agreed to return only on condition that he be installed as bench manager and not be required to play. Reports to that effect were sent out, and Dreyfuss never contradicted them. Today, however, he asserted that no such proposition ever had been made to him, and the only official confirmation of Clarke's desire to remain on the bench came from Secretary Locke, who said the Kansan had informed him he did not intend to play regularly.

Just what Clarke meant by "regularly" is the point now open to argument.

FORM NEW BASEBALL LEAGUE.

Representatives of Six Eastern Illinois Clubs Meet at Pana and Plan a Temporary Organization.

Pana, Ill., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The Eastern Illinois league is the name of a baseball league temporarily organized here today. The towns represented were Pana, Paris, Shelbyville, Taylorville, Mattoon, and Charleston.

The charter of the "Kitty" league will be taken if possible and that may be the name of the league. Charles Wilvart of Pana was made chairman and W. L. Jordan temporary secretary. The teams will be placed on a $600 salary limit, with a guarantee fund of $300. The season will commence May 15 and end Sept. 15.

A meeting will be held at Charleston on Tuesday to complete the organization, when application will be made to the National association for membership.

Big Regatta for Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Cleveland is to have a big open regatta this summer in which all of the best white flyers on the great lakes are expected to take part. While all the details have not been arranged, the Lakewood Yacht club has definitely decided to conduct the regatta, which will be the week after the Interlake Yacht Racing association's big regatta at Put-in-Bay in July.

Alexander Winton, the fleet captain of the Lakewood club, has started the list of prizes by offering a $500 trophy for the sixteen footers.

MAROONS TO MEET ILLINI TONIGHT.

Rival Track Teams to Contest in Opening Event of the College Season.

OUTCOME IS DOUBTFUL.

Chicago Pins Hopes on Winning Hurdles, Quarter, Jump, Pole Vault, and Relay.

Athletes of Chicago and Illinois, the west's greatest indoor college rivals, meet tonight at Urbana in the opening event of the collegiate indoor track season, with members of both teams predicting a defeat for their university. Heavy losses to both squads in the last week have caused a depreciation in both the maroon and the orange and blue hopes.

Illinois' heroes, with the aid of home rooting and home familiarity of the track, figure they have a shade the better, but are unwilling to predict a victory. They will severely miss Burroughs, the star shotputter, who seemed certain of five points in his event, but have gained Carrithers, the old time shotputter, who seems on a par with the maroon weight men.

Maroons Expect Several Firsts.

Chicago hopes to score its points in the hurdles, the quarter, the high jump, the pole vault, and the relay, first places in which Coach Friend is banking on. Few points are expected in the long runs, and it is in these events the maroons fear Illinois may gain too big a lead to overcome.

Illinois presents, as it did last year when it took the maroon team twice in camp, the better balanced squad, but has not so many starperformers as Chicago. Coach Friend's squad is lacking in men to gather in the second and third places, and practically is the team which faced the Illini last winter.

Steffen in the hurdles, Quigley in the quarter, Merriam in the half, Schommer in the high jump, Henneberry in the vault are the five mainstays of the maroon team. Barker in the dash and quarter, Klock in the two mile, Caldwell in the mile, and Capt. Russell in the shotput are the men counted on to gather in seconds.

Maddigan May Not Go.

Coach Friend, with thirteen men, will comprise the maroon squad which will leave this morning for Urbana. Maddigan, the weight man, probably will be left behind, as he developed an infection in his foot yesterday. The makeup of the team is as follows: Capt. Russell, Barker, Graves, Henneberry, Steffen, Pomeroy, Quigley, Merriam, Schommer, Shuart, Caldwell, Klock, and Mathews.

Track Men Remove "Cons."

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Illinois' prospects for the dual meet with Chicago tomorrow night in the local gymnasium were brightened tonight by a report that Jenkins, Bloomfelt, and Smith, three of the "conned" track men, had successfully taken examinations. Miller, a good two miler, will not take his test until tomorrow morning, and Burroughs, the shotputter, is down and out, there being no chance for him to compete unless the faculty should relent at the last, which does not seem probable.

Woods, one of Coach Gill's high jumpers, will not be able to compete in the high jump because of lameness, and Bushnell and Ropp will be in the event.

Expect Lindberg to Win.

Lindberg is highly touted for the quarter mile, for he has been running grandly, and if Jenkins is in as a running mate the Illini look for a first. Lazear has come fast in the hurdles, and it is thought he will beat Steffen. Norris easily cleared eleven feet in the pole vault, in which Hudson also has been entered in the hope that he will earn a third place.

Coach Gill will not pick his relay runners till the last minute. It is admitted that the odds favor the maroon quartet despite the fact that they will be on a strange track. Carrithers was able to put the shot thirty-nine feet, and the football star is counted a victor in the weight event.

Coach Stagg sent word today from Mudlavia that he would be on hand tomorrow night.

West Wins Gymnastic Event.

In the gymnastic tourney, held at Bartlett gym yesterday, West carried off the honors. He had a total of 98 points, while Capt. Barrell had 78; Murraugh, 77; Berndt, 76, and Smith, 65.5, and Steinberg, 63.5.

Central and Evanston Teams to Clash in Dual Contest at North Shore Suburb Tonight.

The Central Y. M. C. A. swimming and water polo teams will meet the Evanston branch of the association in a dual meet tonight in the tank of the North Shore club. The events to be contested are 40 yards, 40 yards breast stroke, 100 yards, 220 yards, 440 yards, plunge for distance, 160 yard relay, and water polo game.

RUNNER DEFEATS SKATER FOY.

Sprinter Anderson Has Margin of Two Feet at End of a Fifty Yard Contest.

Skater William D. Foy raced fifty yards with Sprinter Thompson of the Central Y. M. C. A. track team at Logan Square rink last night and lost to the runner by two feet. The time was :05 3-5. Thompson challenged Foy to the fifty yard match after the latter's showing in the 100 yard skates versus shoes race last Sunday, when Foy was defeated by Runner Hogenson.

Thompson gained a seemingly safe margin in the first part of the race, but in the last few yards the skater came at an alarming rate.

Foy was victor in the quarter mile match race, in which he was opposed by Charles Huguelett. Foy led his competitor all the way and won by ten feet in :44.

DRASTIC PROVISO ON CHILD LABOR.

Wisconsin Legislator Offers a Resolution Urging Congress to Enact Law.

FIXES A TAX OF $1,000.

Property of Offending Firm or Corporation May Be Sold by Failure to Pay.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Among the joint resolutions presented in the legislature today was one by Assemblyman Brockhausen memorializing congress to enact at its present session an act laying a tax of $1,000 a year upon any person or corporation for each child employed under the age of 10 years if such employment is found to be harmful.

It is proposed that the tax be collected annually by the internal revenue collector, and if it is not paid on demand, the penalty is seizure and sale of the property of those from whom it is due.

Preventing corporations or joint stock companies from soliciting insurance.

Editor Summoned to Explain.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—In the Tennessee senate today a resolution was introduced summoning the editor of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal to appear before the bar of the senate to give reason for certain statements made in an editorial criticising the senate, "or be branded a slanderer, a liar, and traducer of good men." The resolution was amended so as to change the word "summon" to "request" and to strike out the last sentence, containing the offensive word slanderer. In that form it passed.

The cause of the resolution was the charge made by the Commercial-Appeal that a number of the senators were drunk when they passed the Pendleton anti-saloon bill, also that the bill was a mere political maneuver and trick to prevent the repeal of the Memphis charter. One political faction in Memphis was seeking to have the city municipal charter repealed in order to legislate certain men out of office.

The Pendleton law makes the anti-saloon law, formerly applicable to small towns only, apply to the entire state also. Should the Memphis charter be repealed now, prohibition would become operative there. It seems that the Commercial-Appeal prefers the officials now in control to a loss of the liquor traffic, but vented its spleen on the senators who brought about this alternative.

Anti-Pass Bill Passed.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 7.—Both houses of the legislature today adopted the anti-pass bill, rejecting an amendment to permit exchange of newspaper advertising for transportation. The bill carries an emergency clause, and probably will become a law Friday night.

TURF TALK IN CHURCH PAPER.

Official Organ of Milwaukee Diocese Suspended Because of Careless Handling of "Fillers."

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The Church Times, the official organ of the Episcopal diocese of Milwaukee, published by Canon C. B. B. Wright, has been suppressed for a month, all because a facetious or careless printer was not particular as to the class of "filler" used to chink up the columns unfilled by the notices of church fast days, editorials, and eulogies. The February number was to be one of tribute to the late Bishop Nicholson, and when the horrified editors saw the pages of church news interspersed with nonholy jokes, stories of the racetrack, betting, and the like it was decided to condemn the issue.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES WANT NEW TEST.

Every Principal in City May Be Compelled to Pass an Examination.

WILL PUNISH ROSSETER.

Educator Who Refused to Wear Yoke of Haleyism to Be "Disciplined."

Every public school principal on the pay rolls of the board of education will be compelled to submit to an examination to prove his fitness to remain in the service, if a resolution introduced at a secret session of the school management committee is adopted by the school board.

A movement to force the principals to undergo a searching test to hold their "jobs" has been begun by the reform school board, and it was said during the day that the resolution is aimed at certain school heads who have grown old in the service.

The resolution is charged up to Trustee Wiley W. Mills. It was asserted that Trustee Mills had made such a motion and that action had been deferred.

Mills Indorses Plan.

Trustee Mills said that while he did not remember having presented such a resolution at the executive session of the committee, he favored such a move.

"It would be a wise measure," he said, "to compel the school principals to take an examination to show their fitness to continue in the service. I understand there are at present a large number of principals who never were examined. It also is undoubtedly true that a number of the principals are not as competent as they should be and the weeding out process could be applied with good results."

Following on the heels of the announcement, made generally in school circles, that such a movement is contemplated the assertion also was made by a school official that a large number of the principals who have opposed the Chicago Teachers' federation are slated for retirement at the end of the present year.

Rosseter to Be "Punished."

One of the first of the principals who is charged with not having been willing to accept orders from Margaret Haley and her following who is to be made to suffer for his failure to fall in line is Edwin C. Rosseter, principal of the Medill High school, who was nominated for the board of district superintendents by Supt. Cooley. Principal Rosseter was active in the organization of the new principals' club, which is regarded as an anti-federation organization, and was elected its first president. For this reason, it was stated yesterday, his name is to be scratched from the slate for the board of district superintendents.

The special committee named to investigate the whole question of reorganizing the board of district superintendents will report to the school management committee this afternoon in favor of increasing the number of district supervisors from three, the present number, to ten, in spite of the fact that Supt. Cooley had said he can get along with only six.

One of the trustees said the slate published in THE TRIBUNE several weeks ago probably would be put through with a few alterations. This slate is as follows:

Orville T. Bright, nominated by Supt. Cooley.

Minnie R. Cowan, nominated by Supt. Cooley.

Mary E. Vaughan, principal of the Lawson school, named in place of E. C. Rosseter, one of Supt. Cooley's nominees.

W. W. Speer, former district superintendent, discharged from office by Supt. Cooley; federationist and anti-Coolyite.

Mrs. Harriet Treadwell, former president Chicago Teachers' federation.

Mary Darrow Olson, sister of Clarence Darrow; Charles G. Griffiths or William J. Bogan for the tenth member.

As there are now three district superintendents—Miss Ella C. Sullivan, E. C. Delano, and W. C. Dodge—the committee will have only seven to name.

Teachers Adopt Mills Idea.

By almost unanimous consent the executive committee of the High School Teachers' club, in a secret meeting in the board rooms, adopted the Mills extension of the Post promotional plan.

The committee also decided to request a head assistant for each high school principal.

The school management committee will take up the matter of crowded high schools today.

SCHONLAU TELLS OF WIEBOLDT

Witness Says Bankrupt Merchant Started for St. Louis the Next Morning After Fire in His Store.

Miss Clara M. Lowe, a nurse at the North Chicago hospital, and Charles Schonlau, a tailor, 271 Wabash avenue, were examined yesterday in the Wieboldt bankruptcy proceedings before Referee Eastman. Miss Lowe was visiting Miss Wieboldt the night the store beneath the flat was burned. She said Miss Wieboldt left the flat as soon as she discovered the fire and did not return.

Schonlau said Wieboldt called to see him the morning following the fire and asked for money.

"I gave him $120, for which I received his check, and went with him to Sixty-third street and Wentworth avenue," Schonlau added. "He boarded a train at the Englewood station for St. Louis and that is the last I saw of him."

Upon the request of the American Trust and Savings bank, receiver in Wieboldt's affairs, Judge Landis entered an order permitting the receiver to sell at private sale two stores owned by Wieboldt. The judge appointed Emil Rosenthal, T. J. Lynch, and William F. Zibell appraisers of the estate of Wieboldt.

SUICIDE OF DESPONDENT MAN.

James Heyworth, Brooding Over Ill Health, Ends Life at Daughter's Residence at Oak Park.

James Heyworth, 71 years old, who had been in ill health several months, committed suicide yesterday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. A. H. King, 189 Harvey avenue, Oak Park, by shooting himself. He left a note which said:

"I have no further desire to live, because the physicians have told me that I am incurable."

John Schmitt, 42 years old, 1111 Elston avenue, attempted to commit suicide by jumping into the river at Chicago avenue. He was rescued by Policeman J. J. Godfrey and Police Operator David McLane of the Chicago avenue police station. He said the spirit of his wife, who died several weeks ago, told him to jump into the river. He will be held for examination as to his mental condition.

Charles Eberhardt of Grossdale, 30 years old, a machinist, shot himself dead. It is said he was despondent because of inability to find employment.

U. OF C. WINS OVER CITY.

Attempt to Collect for Water Used in Dormitory Buildings Defeated by Appellate Court Opinion.

Collection of taxes on water used by the University of Chicago in conducting the school is held not possible in an opinion filed yesterday by the Appellate court.

Contention between the city and the university arose over whether the dormitories and the commons were part of the scheme of education at the school, and in August, 1906, the university filed a bill for an injunction restraining the city from attempting to enforce payment or cutting off the supply.

The Appellate court held a dormitory one of the essential parts of an institution of learning.

OLD TIMERS IN REUNION.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY OBSERVES FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Pioneers of Chicago Gather at Headquarters of Association to Live Over Scenes and Events of Chicago Before the Great Fire—President Urges Members to Give Rather than Bequeath Donations—Deneen Expected, but Could Not Attend.

The Chicago Historical society gave a birthday party—its fiftieth—to 300 of the oldest residents of Chicago at the organization's building, 142 Dearborn avenue, last evening. It was an old fashioned home gathering, where anecdotes and stories of early Chicago, many of which dated back far beyond the great fire, were retold with as much interest as when first they were spun.

President Franklin H. Head, who presided at the meeting, called the attention of the members to the advantages of donating to the organization before instead of after death, naming Marshall Field and Joseph Leiter as examples whose lead might well be followed.

"It's all right to get the habit of naming the society in your wills, but it's much better to do it while you are alive and well. It is much more cheerful to receive substantial assistance from a live member than from a dead one," said Mr. Head. "Both Mr. Field and Mr. Leiter did this, and their donations were appreciated accordingly."

Tell Stories of Trading Post Era.

Ezra B. McCagg aroused old memories of the days before the fire by telling of incidents from the earliest of days of the city, or the trading post, as it was then, up to the fire of '71. Edward G. Mead, president of the Massachusetts Historical society, offered the congratulations of the society which he represented upon the long and prosperous existence of the Chicago body.

The early part of the evening was spent in examining the relics which adorn the tables and walls of the rooms. The brown leather bound files of THE TRIBUNE of 1856 and the early '60s were taken from their shelves and examined by some of the men whose names were then prominent in business and social affairs. In turning over the worn leaves of the old copies of THE TRIBUNE Fernando Jones found many references to himself in both the society and business columns.

Deneen Explains Absence.

Gov. Deneen had been expected to speak, but a letter received by the committee which had the "birthday party" in charge explained that unforeseen circumstances would prevent his presence.

"Gov. Deneen's letter shows such sympathy with our work and appreciation of its value that I have written him that I would see that he was not held blamable in any way," said Mr. Head, who read the governor's letter.

IN THE SOCIETY WORLD.

Mrs. John Russell Winterbotham, 2215 Michigan avenue, will give a supper for forty or more guests this evening in honor of Miss Marie Richards and Miss Abbie White of New York and Miss Baker of Baltimore, who are visiting her daughters, the Misses Margaret and Katherine Winterbotham. After supper there will be a cotillion, led by Mr. J. Allen Haines and Mr. Rosecrans Baldwin.

Mr. Ralph Poole gave a theater party last evening for Miss White, Miss Richards, and Miss Baker, and tomorrow evening a party, including them, the Misses Winterbotham, Mr. Ernest Poole, Mr. Ralph Poole, and several others, will attend the ice carnival at the Lake Forest Winter club.

Miss Mabel Linn will give a dinner on Monday evening for the Misses Winterbotham and their out of town friends. Miss Margaret Winterbotham and Mr. Ernest Poole will be married on Tuesday afternoon.

The ice carnival at the Winter club in Lake Forest is an annual event there and, as usual, will begin at 8 o'clock. Mr. F. C. Aldrich will have charge and Mr. Scott Durand will lead the march on the ice. There will be a cotillion in the clubhouse at 10 o'clock, fifteen figures to be danced, each led by a different guest.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Hall McCormick, 124 Rush street, entertained at bridge last evening at 8:30 o'clock. There were forty guests and the affair was in honor of Miss Stickney of Baltimore, who is visiting Miss McCormick.

Miss Laura Thomas of Denver will attend as maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Melissa Rachel Ingals to Mr. Clarence Lyon Fisher on Thursday evening, Feb. 21, in Hyde Park Presbyterian church, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Florence Fisher of Cincinnati, Miss Helen Gross of Hartford, Conn.; Miss Abigail Ferrell of Boston, Miss Asenath Parker and Miss Charlotte Smith of Chicago. Mr. Ernest Heyl will be best man, and the groomsmen will be Mr. Francis Ingals and Mr. Nelson Buck of Chicago, Mr. Lyon De Camp of New York, and Mr. Gordon Fisher of Pittsburg. The bride-elect is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. Fletcher Ingals, 554 Woodlawn avenue.

Mrs. Marshall Field Jr., who arrived in the city on Wednesday afternoon, is the guest of Mrs. Henry Dibblee, 1922 Calumet avenue, during her brief stay in Chicago.

Mrs. Samuel R. Jewett, 467 North State street, will entertain at bridge next Monday afternoon, and again on the following Wednesday, Miss Sheridan of Washington to be the guest of honor at the latter affair.

The engagement is announced of Miss Emma Stanbery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stanbery, 1410 Chicago avenue, Evanston, to Mr. John Mott Boswell of Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. La Clair of Ottawa, Ill., announce the engagement of their daughter, Vera, to Mr. Lothrop Perkins of Oak Park, Ill. The wedding will take place next June.

Mr. and Mrs. Myer Silverman, 3142 Vernon avenue, who recently announced the engagement of their daughter, Sara, to Mr. Harry R. Goldman, recall their at home on Sunday owing to sudden bereavement in the family.

Mrs. Jacob Cline, 4137 Indiana avenue, will be at home tomorrow afternoon in honor of her sister, Mrs. Julius Baran of New York.

Mrs. Elmer B. Martin of the Elms hotel will leave Chicago today for Oklahoma City to visit friends, and will spend March and April in southern California.

Mrs. Julius Ruben of New York, formerly of Chicago, is visiting Mrs. Nathan S. Gross, 4909 Washington Park place.

Mrs. James Frank Waughop, 5039 Ellis avenue, will hold a large reception tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. She will be assisted in receiving by her two nieces, Mrs. Sterling Goddard and Miss Anna Waughop. Those who will aid through the rooms are Mrs. John T. Alexander, Mrs. Harry A. Wheeler, Mrs. William H. Duffield, Mrs. Arthur Waughop, and Miss Katherine Becker. The young women who will preside in the dining room are Miss Bertha Stevens, Miss Frances Stevens, Miss Fleta Duffield, and Miss Elizabeth Alexander.

FIND ARSENIC IN VRZAL CASE.

Authorities Discover Evidence of Poison—Bodies of Two Others to Be Exhumed.

The finding of arsenic in sufficient quantity to cause death in the organs of Martin Vrzal, for whose alleged murder Herman Billick is held in the county jail, was reported yesterday to Coroner Hoffman by Prof. W. M. Haines.

Analysis of the organs of Mrs. Rose Vrzal and her daughter will not be completed for about ten days. The inquest has been postponed until after the chemist's report shall have been received.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict in the afternoon that Walter Krupa, 10 years old, 8845 Commercial avenue, South Chicago, whose body was found in a marsh, was murdered.

THE "ALL-NIGHT" BANK

S. W. Cor. Dearborn and Monroe Sts.

Shows an Increase of 40% in 30 Days

The day and night banking idea is succeeding in Chicago. More and more people are taking advantage of facilities for banking at other than "regular" hours. January 12th a statement was given the papers that during the month of December 15,803 patrons entered the bank, of which number 5,995 transacted business between 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., and 9,808 between 3 p. m. and 10 a. m.

During the month of January 25,132 people entered the bank, an increase in round numbers of 10,000 more people or 40% over the month of December. Of this number, 12,810 came in between 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., and 12,322 between 3 p. m. and 10 a. m. This increase of 40% shows a gratifying appreciation of the day and night facilities offered by the Jennings bank.

STOCK LIST GETS A BOOST

PRICES CLOSE STRONG AT BEST QUOTATIONS OF DAY.

Absence of Weakness in Individual Shares, Which Has Been Unsettling Factor for Some Time—Temporary Setback in Union Pacific Only Exception to Favorable Session—Reports as to Winter Wheat Are Encouraging for Most Localities.

[BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—[Special.]—Stocks took a more decided upward movement today than for some time. The closing was strong at the best.

There was an absence of the weakness in individual stocks which has been an unsettling influence in recent markets, even when the general tendency was upwards, and this was in favor of the market. A temporary setback in Missouri Pacific after the first recovery was the only exception of importance. There was no clear reflection of any important developments in the conditions of affairs. Sentiment was favorably affected by the advices from the winter wheat regions of ample snow covering to insure the safety of that crop from freezing weather for the immediate future.

Assertions of an intended increase in the dividends on Southern Pacific which have been often heard were also used with effect, especially in the case of Atchison. Southern Pacific was sluggish, and did not respond even to the later rise in Union Pacific upon the reported return to his office after a period of illness of the head of the systems. Erie was a conspicuous feature of the strength, the movement showing evidence of being under the same auspices as former large operations in Reading.

The intention of railroad companies to retrench their plans for any future projects of improvement is now generally accepted as a fixed determination. A reduction of the pressure for new capital is expected to result. But, also, a subsidence of part of the demand for materials and for labor is to be accepted as an inevitable consequence.

The feature of the day in the money market was the free offerings of funds on time, supplies coming into the market from many sources, and causing a material recession in rates. Foreign exchange was firmer, although the strong position reported by the banks of England and France showed the growing strength of the foreign financial position, in spite of the retention of the 5 per cent discount rate by the Bank of England.

Bonds were firm. Total sales, par value, $2,080,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

Money on call easy, 2½@3 per cent; ruling rate, 3%; closing bid, 2¼; offered at 2½ per cent. Time loans active and easy; 60 days, 4½@5 per cent; 90 days, 5 per cent; 6 months, 5¼ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 5¾@6¼ per cent. Sterling exchange firmer with actual business in bankers' bills at 484.65@484.70 for demand and at 480.60@480.85 for 60 day bills. Posted rates, 481½ and 485½. Commercial bills, 480⅝. Bar silver, 68¼. Mexican dollars, 52⅝. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds firm.

CHICAGOANS SEE GALVESTON.

County Democracy, 130 Strong, Visits Texan City—Loud in Praise of Southerners' Work.

Galveston, Tex., Feb. 7.—[Special.]—The County Democracy of Chicago, 130 strong, was in Galveston today and saw the town. "We are having the time of our lives," said Capt. Louis Holman, who voiced the sentiment of the crowd.

Arriving early in the morning, breakfast was had, and afterwards, with flowers plucked in the open parks and along the streets in the coat lapels, the Chicagoans, headed by their band of forty pieces, paraded the business streets and serenaded the newspaper offices.

After having shown the visitors the seawall, the grade raising operations, and other things, representatives of the business league and chamber of commerce and other citizens led them to the wharf, where the Mariner was boarded for a cruise along the wharves. These, the visitors say, are the best in the country. At 3 o'clock the democracy left for Houston, New Orleans, and other points.

BOOST IN PRICE OF EGGS CAUSES TALK OF A "CORNER."

With Advance of Four Cents During Last Week Commission Men See a Reign of Fancy Figures.

The sharp advance in the price of eggs established by the butter and egg board yesterday gave rise to much talk of a corner in "hen fruit" in South Water street, and it was taken by some commission men to presage extravagant values for this commodity in the next week or so. The top price for fancy eggs yesterday was 31c per dozen, an advance of 4 cents in the last week.

The market price was ahead of the actual selling prices, however, for although the board prices for fresh eggs ranged from 29 to 30 cents, sales were generally made at material concessions from these figures. The speculative element on the butter and egg board, which is in control of the committee on market prices, have cornered the egg market and are taking advantage of the situation to hold up the customer.

Several of the big speculators on the street, together with representatives of a number of stockyards firms, including Swift and Armour, have been steady buyers of eggs recently, claiming that the shortage of transportation facilities is interfering with shipments and that the supply of fresh eggs is growing small.

Many of the most conservative houses on South Water street ridicule the idea of a corner in eggs, and say the fact that fresh stock is being sold 2 to 3 cents lower than market prices is proof that there is no unusual scarcity.

It was claimed that the big stocks of storage eggs have not been sold as liberally as usual this year on account of the mild weather in the early part of the winter, and that the speculative contingent is manipulating the price of fresh eggs to make a market on which they can dispose of their refrigerator stock at profitable prices. The season for cold storage eggs is drawing to a close and holders will have to market the biggest part of their stock in the next few weeks.

CONSTABLE ROUTED BY BEES.

Expert Writ Server of Evanston Fails to Make Levy After Short Session with Insects.

Sam Harrison, a constable, whose reputation in Evanston for serving writs of all kinds is unequaled, met defeat yesterday. Armed with proper legal documents he went from Justice Boyer's office to 428 Barton avenue, to remove the belongings of Frank Waterloo, against whom a judgment had been entered. When the constable arrived all the belongings of Waterloo had disappeared, except five hives of bees.

Harrison, who is said to have removed hot stoves, and to have once levied on an elephant, attempted to remove the bees. He seized one box, and, while carrying it toward the door, the insects attacked him. He left without the bees.

Harrison told Justice Boyer he had met a Waterloo, but not the one he was looking for.

EX-WIFE DEMANDS $20,000 OF "DIVORCE PARTY" HERO.

Girl Who Got Decree of Separation from Frank Raimbault Charges Him with Slanderous Statements.

Closely following on the heels of his "divorce party" Wednesday night Frank Raimbault, an Irving Park saloonkeeper and politician, was yesterday made defendant in a $20,000 damage suit filed by his former wife. The action is based on alleged slanderous statements made by him.

Mrs. Raimbault recently obtained a decree of divorce and was allowed to resume her maiden name, Jewell A. King. All her life she has lived in Irving Park, where her parents are well known. Raimbault, too, has lived many years in Irving Park. She is 19 years old and Raimbault more than 40. They were married and divorced less than three months ago.

After the divorce was granted, she declares, through her attorney, George F. Mulligan, she was willing to let the matter drop. Not so with Raimbault. Instead, he is said by Attorney Mulligan to have circulated stories among her friends that he married her a week after meeting her, and then allowed her to get a divorce because she was a "good little girl."

"He got up a divorce party, to which he invited many of her friends," said Mulligan. "He said he wanted to show them that he was not as 'bad' a fellow as he had been characterized. This had a tendency to injure my client."

WHEAT SOARS AT FINISH.

ENORMOUS BUYING BOOSTS THE MAY PRICE OVER 80 CENTS.

Deluge of Supporting Orders Mark Final Minutes of Session—Shorts in Stampede to Cover—Russian Situation Basis of Bullish Sentiment—Export Demand Larger—Little Change in Corn—Oats at New High Level—Provisions Off.

Enormous buying in the last few minutes of yesterday's session lifted the price of May wheat to 80⅛c, the highest for the future since last October, when 80⅝c was touched. When the big supporting orders began to roll in a reasonably sane pit was transformed into a bedlam, excitement increasing until the gong called a halt to operations. Except for a short time early the market displayed soundness throughout, shorts being more uneasy and bulls more confident. The Russian situation and the developments from it starred in the day's news, the lion's share of which was claimed by the market optimists. Final quotations were 80@80⅛c for May, ¾c higher; 79⅝c for July, ⅝c firmer; and 79¼c for September, ⅜@½c stronger, the top prices for the deferred months and within 1-16c of the best showing for the May.

Big Sales of American Wheat.

Failure of Liverpool to give full response to the sharp upturn here the day before was largely responsible for enough pressure in the wheat market to cause a decline of ⅜c for the more active months early, but the softer spots were only momentary realities. Confirmation of the serious state of affairs in Russia picked up color as the session wore on and material expression of the nervousness of shorts soon was strongly evidenced by their desire to cover. Big purchases of durum and Manitoba wheat were made in this country—here, at Duluth, and at the seaboard—presumably for Russian account. St. Petersburg was said to have bought 240,000 bu of durum in Chicago since Wednesday and Duluth reported sales materially exceeding 300,000 bu. Liverpool closed unchanged to ⅛d higher, considered by conservatives as a good showing in view of that market's display of strength recently. Private advices indicated no abatement of alarm at the English market over the situation in the czar's domains. Continental markets also were higher for the most part, good advances being made at Paris, Berlin, and Antwerp.

The general run of advices showed further improvement in the domestic cash demand. Millers northwest continued to grab up all the good grain offered at the stiff prices, and in the southwest flourmakers were active and persistent purchasers. Kansas City sold 100,000 bu to Milwaukee millers, and the volume of inquiry for red winter wheat at the local tables was considerably better, although actual sales were limited by higher prices. Liverpool reported spring patent flour 3d higher, and the flour situation at Kansas City and St. Louis was said to be more promising.

Movement Continues Light.

The general movement of wheat to market continued light, primary receipts—298,000 bu—showing about 132,000 bu under those of the corresponding day last year. Duluth and Minneapolis reported 197 cars, against 313 last year, with only a small percentage of them grading contract. Winnipeg received 32 cars, compared to 177 last year. Seaboard clearances, wheat and flour, were 272,000 bu. Minneapolis stocks showed a decrease of 115,000 bu for five days. According to the Price Current, conditions in the winter wheat regions were generally favorable. Weather in most directions was less severe, although the recent snows are still aggravating the general car situation. Broomhall estimated that the week's Argentine exports would be 2,800,000 bu, compared to actual shipments of 2,392,000 bu the corresponding time last year, but the expected increase had practically no effect on the traders, who, when the figures were given out, were in a scramble to buy.

The late spurt of buying was headed by a leading cash concern, which took all of 3,000,000 bu, and one of the big private wire houses, whose total purchases were estimated at 1,000,000 bu. The rush to take on wheat involved a stampede on the part of large and small shorts to cover. Most of the wheat handed out on the bulges came from longs who were satisfied with the profits in sight. The northwest was a seller early. Outside domestic markets were slow to take on strength, but late in the day they awakened to the spirit in this market.

July Corn Is Supported.

At the start corn displayed firmness, but sufficient pressure soon developed to cause a slight reaction. A leading packer sold freely of the May, and there was considerable profit taking by scattered longs at and a little under 47½c. The July was relatively stronger than the nearby future, being well supported by an elevator concern with western connections. Local shorts were disposed to cover on the softer spots. The day's receipts here were 278 cars, of which a car graded contract, slightly under the amount expected; and the estimated local arrivals for today were 396 cars. Shipments hence were 627,000 bu, and seaboard clearances aggregated 362,000 bu. Total primary receipts were 644,000 bu, against 452,000 bu the similar day in 1906.

The local cash demand for corn was slow, although prices were firmer, and the east did little. Export bids at the seaboard were reported reduced. Argentine exports for the week were estimated at 400,000 bu, against shipments of 56,000 bu last week and 634,000 bu last year. Liverpool closed ⅜@½d higher, largely on continued unfavorable advice from the South American republic. As the session progressed values firmed up from the early easiness, the increasing strength in wheat having a beneficial influence. The close showed 47¼@⅜c for May, unchanged; 47c for July, ⅛c higher; and 47¼c for September, unchanged.

New Lofty Level for Oats.

Oats continued their upward march, scoring new lofty prices. There was a slight setback early, caused chiefly by realizing by local longs, but good support developed on the weaker spots. Offerings became scantier as the session wore on, cash houses recently on the selling side being mentioned among the buyers. Pit sleuths said that the leading long did not sell any of the grain. The cash demand was better and prices ruled firmer. Overnight sales to the east were reported important in the aggregate. Local arrivals—80 cars—were scarcely sufficient to fill current demands here, and the estimate for today was only 89 cars. Shipments hence were 263,000 bu. Final prices were 41c for May, ⅜c higher; 37⅞c for July, ¼c up, and 33⅝c for September, ⅛c firmer. May sold up to 41⅛c.

Provisions Have a Relapse.

Larger receipts of hogs at the leading points, heavier packing for the week, and a drop in values at the yards worked for sharply lower prices in the provision market. The weaker spots found some of the packers and scattered floor bulls moderate buyers. Selling was quite general. Hog receipts here aggregated 87,000, against 71,000 the corresponding day last year. The week's packing—655,000—showed an increase of 20,000 over that of the similar period last year, but the packing since Nov. 1—7,725,000—shows 940,000 under that of the corresponding time last year. Shipments of meats hence were under those of a year ago, but those of lard were comparatively larger. Final prices showed declines of 15@17½c for pork, 7½@10c for lard, and 10@12½c for ribs. Estimated local hog receipts for today were 25,000.

Firm Tone to Rye.

The rye market was firm, although the demand was not large. Receipts were 11 cars. No. 2 free on board sold at 69c; No. 3, 62@65c. February was quoted 62½c bid, 63½c asked; May sold at 62½c.

Barley offerings are remarkably light for this time of year and trade is correspondingly dull. A sale of 30,000 bu to arrive was reported. Receipts were 20 cars. Feed was quoted 47@49c; malting, 50@59c; screenings, 36@49c.

Flaxseed was 1½c higher nominally. No. 1 northwestern was quoted $1.25; No. 1 nominally $1.18. Northwestern receipts were 8 cars at Minneapolis and 10 cars at Duluth.

Timothy seed was quiet. Contract spot seed was quoted $4.50@4.55; March, $4.60@4.75; country lots, $3.25@4.35.

Clover was firm at $13.50 for contract spot and $13.60 for March. Cash seed ranged from $9.00@12.50.

INTERESTING TRADE GOSSIP ON 'CHANGE.

Higher relative prices were paid for No. 2 red wheat in store here yesterday, a sale of 25,000 bu being reported at 3¼c under May, with a number of bids of 3½c under. For car lots the demand was slow, but the few offerings were taken at steady prices. Export houses reported a continued demand for durum wheat for early shipment, but cables on winter wheat were still materially out of line. One of the largest houses here cabled the principal European markets Wednesday night for bids and the best bids they received in response were several cents out of line, and some markets did not reply at all. Large sales of durum wheat were reported. Duluth reported 320,000 bu worked there and said that there was a strong demand. Minneapolis prices were unchanged, No. 1 northern bringing 3½c over May. Kansas City reported the sale of 100,000 bu No. 2 hard to Milwaukee. Local mills there were active buyers also, paying 75½c for choice turkey wheat free on board. Practically all of the New York exporters had orders for durum wheat. Baltimore wired that they were having the best demand for No. 2 red wheat in months. The demand for cash corn here was slower, but prices were steady at ¼c higher. Oats were strong at ½@1c higher prices. Sales of oats were larger than for some time at the highest prices thus far obtained. Local sales were 50,000 bu wheat, 80,000 bu corn, and 400,000 bu oats. Seaboard sales were 480,000 bu wheat, mainly durum; 68,000 bu corn, and 30,000 bu oats.

Prof. Mark Q. Carleton, chief cerealist of the bureau of plant industry at Washington, who was instrumental in introducing durum wheat into this country, was in La Salle street yesterday. Mr. Carleton was much interested in the big demand from Russia for this wheat at the present time, inasmuch as it was in the Volga district, where the wheat from this country is now going, that he secured the first 1,000 bu of durum wheat brought into this country seven years ago. The new wheat, in spite of much opposition, rapidly gained in favor, especially in the semi-arid districts. Last year between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 bu were raised in the northwest, and it is believed that 50 per cent of this year's crop in the northwest will be durum. It is also growing in popularity in the southwest, and large areas are being sown to it in the Texas panhandle and in eastern Colorado and western Kansas, land which was formerly barren. These sections are now producing the finest No. 1 durum. Prof. Carleton claims that the work of his department has established the fact that durum wheat possesses every qualification for making popular French bread. In Russia durum wheat commands a premium over ordinary spring wheat of 5c to 7c per bu. In this country durum is sold at a 10c discount under spring wheat. It is believed that the disparity in price which now prevails will gradually lessen.

A sharp advance in the price of memberships is expected if the good business of the last few weeks is maintained. There was a little more inquiry yesterday, and membership brokers claim that the situation is ripe for a substantial advance. During the last year the membership has been reduced by the boards buying in of memberships to the number of nearly fifty, while about 100 cards have changed hands, as a usual thing passing from weak hands to those more able to hold them.

"There will be a day of reckoning for these eleventh hour corn bulls sooner or later," said a prominent cash man yesterday. "The country is full of corn and the movement is simply restricted by the lack of railroad facilities. Iowa elevators, as a rule, are filled to the top and locked, waiting for cars. There are at present about 700 cars of corn at Clinton, on the Northwestern, and the other roads are in nearly as bad condition. At Holmes, Ia., there has not been a car since Jan. 15. The relative position of the futures is weaker than last December. At that time No. 3 corn was selling 3½@3⅝c under the May option, while now it is at a discount of 4¼@4½c. There will be no dearth of oats, either. I know of one line house that has 1,000,000 bu oats in its country elevators, which is being held until the corn can be moved. There will be an enormous movement of all grains this spring."

"May corn is now just 5c a bu higher than it sold on the 20th of this month a year," said S. P. Arnot of the Updike Commission company. "It is within 2⅝c of the highest point it reached during the life of the option last year. We raised a crop of 220,000,000 bu larger than last year's crop. We carried over into this crop 38,000,000 bu more than was carried over the previous year. Our exports during December and January alone were 27,000,000 bu short of the export clearances for the same time last year. Our short hog crop makes it certain that our home consumption will not be any larger than last year, if as large. These are facts, not fancies, and might be worthy the consideration of some of the bull enthusiasts."

Big buying of wheat by Knight-McDougal, Lichtstern, Bartlett-Frazier, Ware-Leland, the Northern Grain company, O'Brien, and Barrell was the feature of the wheat trade. The buying was especially heavy right at the close. Valentine was an early seller, but was later credited with buying freely. Wrenn, Clement-Curtis, Cochrane, and Pringle were on the selling side. Lake, Updike, and Bartlett-Frazier were good buyers of corn. Cudahy brokers and Pringle sold. In oats the Northern Grain company and Peavey were the best buyers, with Buckley and Helmholz leading the selling. The Cudahy Packing company and Roberts were the leading sellers of provisions, with Schwarz and scattered commission houses buyers.

"The growing winter wheat plant is generally protected with snow covering, the previous good condition being maintained. Interior offerings of grain free," said the Price Current. "Colder winter weather increasing consumption of feeding materials. Country grain elevators accumulating supplies. Packing of hogs at leading western centers for the week 655,000, compared with 605,000 last week and 635,000 last year. Aggregate packing to date from Nov. 1, 7,725,000, against 8,665,000 last year, indicating a decrease of 940,000 hogs."

Sales on the call were: Corn—No. 3, February shipment, 1,000 bu at 42½c billed through; No. 3 yellow, February shipment, 5,000 bu at 43⅜c track Chicago. Oats—Standard, March shipment, 5,000 bu at 40¼c track Chicago.

Closing prices for wheat in foreign markets were: Liverpool, unchanged to ⅛d higher; Paris, ¼@½c up; Antwerp, unchanged to 1¼c higher; Berlin, 1¼c better, and Budapest unchanged.

Schwabacher estimated local provision stocks at 2,000 brls old pork, 25,500 brls new pork, 22,500 tcs new lard, and 10,750,000 lbs new ribs.

There was said to have been good buying of both May and July wheat in New York and Chicago yesterday for French account.

Estimated receipts for today are: Wheat, 9 cars; corn, 396 cars; oats, 89 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 16 cars; hogs, 25,000.

Winnipeg received 32 cars of wheat, against 177 a year ago.

Fred Bental has applied for membership on the board.

SLASH IN STRAWBOARD CO.

BARBER WIPES $1,221,731 FROM SURPLUS FUND.

Makes Statement Showing That More than One-Half the Concern's Earnings Last Year Came from One Plant and That the Deduction Is Necessary to Cover Depreciation—Good Report of Earnings of Chicago Pneumatic Tool.

The balance sheet of the American Strawboard company, issued at the annual meeting yesterday, showed $1,221,731 and wiped out the surplus account by President O. C. Barber. Mr. Barber has a fight on with a majority of the stockholders of the United Boxboard company with reference to the management, and apparently he proposed to show that the Strawboard company, a subsidiary concern, was not worth much. The only thing which will appeal to persons other than stockholders is the fact that the Strawboard statements heretofore have been misleading, if the present one be correct.

President Barber made, at all events, an interesting statement, though a part of it was a defense of his actions in another company. The statement, in part, follows:

Unexpected Information.

"Your directors have charged to surplus account for depreciation $1,221,731. This seems a large item for depreciation, but it is fully justified from the fact that since 1892 nothing has been charged off for depreciation other than ordinary repairs. There have been erroneous statements published that the value of the American Strawboard company stock is much in excess of that put upon it by the directors of the United Boxboard and Paper company. This, perhaps, can be more easily illustrated by the fact that the earnings of the American Strawboard company for the year 1906 without any deduction for depreciation amounted to $395,526, more than one-half of which was earned by the Circleville mill, or $214,476. The balance of the earnings were made by the stores and the other eight mills that were in operation during the year.

"The value of the Circleville mill is today less than its original cost, it having been built twenty-two years ago. The cost of the mill when finished was $450,000. It has a capacity today of 65 tons of board per day, which is a little over one-third of the production of the strawboard of the American Strawboard company per day in the last year.

"If eight mills running earn less than one-half of the earnings of the company, and one mill earns over one-half, and that mill only cost in its original construction $450,000, by what process of reasoning is the whole property of the American Strawboard company worth any more than the value placed upon it by the directors of the United Boxboard and Paper company when it offered the equity in the shares to the stockholders of the company at $37.87 per share, exclusive of the $2.00 per share recently paid as a dividend? I give the fact as a further justification for charging off the apparent large sum that has stood upon the books of the company as a surplus.

More to Be Charged Off.

"It is the opinion of your officers and directors that a still greater sum must be charged off to get the property of the company down to a solid basis, and that the earnings of the company must be largely used for the purpose of repairing and equipping the mills that it runs with machinery and appliances of modern type to meet the competition of outside modern mills. In addition to properly equipping the present mills in operation a large sum of money must be expended in relocating a number of machines which today are idle and instead of producing a profit for the company are maintained at a large expense, as is evidenced by the annual statement by the sum of $38,000.

"The management has already started to properly rebuild and reëquip the mill at Wilmington, Ill., the total cost of which will require an expenditure of from $120,000 to $130,000. The large amount charged off to depreciation only applied to the mills that are entirely out of commission at the present time.

"When the American Strawboard company was originally organized it had twenty-one operated mills and a capacity of over 400 tons per day, which was about 65 per cent of the production of boards consumed in the United States of all kinds. The capacity of the mills today of the entire country will aggregate about 2,100 tons per day, and there is cut and consumed of all kinds of board about 1,600 tons per day."

President Duntley's Report.

The company evidently had a good year. Its dividend rate, however, is but 4 per cent. In his statement to shareholders President Duntley says, among other things:

"As stated in previous reports, this company acquired the Consolidated Pneumatic Tool company, Limited, London, and since that time has organized the Internationale Pressluft and Elektricitats-Gesellschaft, Berlin, and has purchased the Canadian Pneumatic Tool company, Limited, of Montreal. All of these organizations show during the year increased volume of business and substantial gains in assets, with the result that this company has benefited in additional facilities for marketing its output, with resulting increased profits.

In connection with the acquirement of the business of the Philadelphia Pneumatic Tool company, Philadelphia, and the organization and extension of the foreign companies mentioned above, it was thought desirable to borrow temporarily $195,000.00, which amount is included in the item of bills payable, amounting to $247,499.94. The amount so borrowed has been more than offset by the additional assets acquired, and the profits resulting would appear to justify the wisdom of this course of action.

"Substantial additions to the plants have been made during the year, and development work completed has exceeded that of the previous year, requiring a considerable portion of time of the management and liberal expenditures.

"Mention is made of the fact that of the authorized issue of $2,500,000 bonds $200,000 are still in the treasury, and $293,000 have been retired for sinking fund purposes, leaving outstanding at this date $2,007,000.

"The excess current assets at Dec. 31, 1906, $1,542,075.99, shows an increase of over $883,000.00 since your company was organized five years ago. In addition, large expenditures have been made during the year in providing additional plant capacity and, as stated previously, substantial amounts have been added to the assets of the foreign organizations."

Western Electric Annual.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Western Electric company was held in Chicago yesterday.

The company's sales for the fiscal year ending Nov. 30, 1906, were $69,245,531, as compared with $44,145,753 in the previous year, an increase of 56.9 per cent. This unusual increase in the volume of business occurred in part from the large expenditures of the Bell telephone companies for new construction.

The company was able to currently borrow the considerable amounts required to provide working capital for the increased business. A portion of the indebtedness thus incurred will be retired during 1907. No addition to the present outstanding capital stock of $15,000,000 is now contemplated for the immediate future.

The principal additions to plant during 1906 were two additions to the cable plant at Hawthorne, the construction at Hawthorne of a switchboard and woodworking factory, now nearing completion; warehouses at Atlanta, Pittsburg, and San Francisco, and additional machinery for the Chicago and New York factories.

In the early part of the year the board of directors established a pension fund of $400,000 for the benefit of superannuated or disabled employés. To this $150,000 has been added for the year 1906. There are now thirteen pensioners on the roll.

In December, 1906, there were in the company's employ 26,938 people, as compared with 19,704 in December, 1905.

Owing to the high prices of metals, especially copper and lead, and the high rates prevailing for money for new investments, customers are not planning to do as much construction work in the coming year as they have done during the last year. This tendency is likely to result in a smaller business for the company in 1907 than it obtained in 1906.

Retiring directors were reëlected.

Dividends Declared.

The National Biscuit company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock, payable on Feb. 28. Books close on Feb. 14 and open on March 1.

A dispatch from Houghton, Mich., said: "The officers of the Calumet and Arizona company say they are still undecided regarding the dividend action at Friday's meeting of the board. Secretary Campbell is out of town. Locally a $5 payment is expected."

The American Tobacco company declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent on its common stock, payable on March 1, for the purpose of paying the dividend and also for holding the annual stockholders' meeting on March 13. The transfer books will close on Feb. 15 and reopen on March 14.

The Grand Rapids railway company declared its regular dividend of 1 per cent on its common stock, payable on March 1 to stock of record on Feb. 15.

Pig Iron Market Irregular.

Rogers, Brown & Co., Chicago office, says: "Seldom in the history of the iron business have the several markets of the country shown so much variation. This condition of affairs is brought about by peculiar local conditions governing the large producing centers.

"Referring particularly to the Chicago market, it may be interesting to note that, while affected at present by influences which do not as a rule cut any figure here, it is inherently strong. Local furnaces are so well sold up for this year that they are not affected by the fact that some outside interests are booking the business for local consumers. Even at a much reduced melting rate, furnaces in this district would have no trouble in disposing of their make for this year and at figures as satisfactory as prices ruling at present.

"Southern iron furnaces are holding firm and a strong rumor was current the week that some of the larger southern interests contemplated an advance."

Can to Be Listed in New York.

It is announced that American Can shares are to be listed on the New York stock exchange. This fact may in part account for the recent activity. If the stock is to be listed in the east it would indicate that the New York insiders are taking some interest in the price of the security.

Chicago Stocks.

On the local stock exchange American Can preferred showed further firmness. Chicago Subway sold off. Quaker Oats was again firm. In the bond department Pneumatic Tool 5s worked lower.

FIELD RESIDENCE IS SOLD

PURCHASED AT AUCTION BY ATTORNEY WILLIAM G. BEALE.

Property Disposed Of by Order of the Probate Court at Request of Daughter-in-Law of the Late Merchant—Breaks the Last Link Connecting Members of His Immediate Family with the City He Helped to Build to Its Present Magnitude.

A homely hack drove up to the entrance of a building at 57 Dearborn street shortly after noon yesterday, and a man, escorting a woman, whose sweet, sad face was partly concealed by a black veil, alighted. After a brief conference with half a dozen persons in the building the two reëntered the cab and the driver drove away.

Probably not more than two persons outside of the half dozen with whom the conference was held knew it, but the woman was Mrs. Marshall Field Jr., and the informal conference in the low ceiled room, which lasted hardly more than fifteen minutes, broke the last link that has connected the members of the immediate family of Marshall Field with the city he helped to build.

Auction of Field Residence.

The occasion was the public auction sale of the Field residence at 1919 Prairie avenue, held in response to a Probate court decree issued several weeks ago at Mrs. Field's request. The property, including the interest of the three children, Marshall III., Henry, and Gwendolyn, and Mrs. Field's dower rights, was sold to William G. Beale at a price which will approximate $50,000. The sale must be approved by the Probate court before it is declared final.

When Mrs. Field entered the sale rooms of the real estate board, where the auction was held, several real estate dealers and clerks near the door looked up in momentary interest, removed their hats, threw away their cigars, and went on with their work. Then James McKeever quietly opened the sale.

Mr. Beale's only opponent in the bidding was F. Wight Neumann, who started with an offer of $10,000. When the two had reached $14,000 by $500 steps Mrs. Field was beginning to look annoyed, and Mr. McKeever stopped the sale to announce that neither the court nor Mrs. Field would consider any such bid.

Beale Buys to Sell Again.

Without changing his expression Mr. Neumann bid $14,500.

"Well," said Mr. Beale, impatiently, "I'll give $40,000."

No other offer was made, and, after the customary "Once—twice—three times," the sale was declared made, the auctioneer explaining that the sum offered was for the minors' interest in the property and that the sale is subject to the dower interest and the unpaid taxes. These items will add something over $10,000 to the price.

Mr. Beale announced that he had purchased the property to place it on the market for immediate sale, and the auction was declared closed.

Mrs. Field was smiling as she went out. "I'm glad it's over," she was heard to say. The sale removes the last obstacle to Mrs. Field's taking up her residence near Rugby, England, where Marshall III. and Henry, to whom she is greatly devoted, are in school.

GRAIN BUSINESS BADLY MUDDLED.

Interstate Commerce Commission Finds Hopeless Condition at Kansas City.

TRIBUTE ON EACH BUSHEL

Shippers and Carriers Have to Pay Under Board of Trade Rules.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 7.—Irritated because of a seeming disposition upon the part of George H. Crosby, general freight traffic manager of the Burlington railway, to evade direct answers to questions, E. E. Clark, interstate commissioner, said in the Atchison grain elevator hearing today:

"I wish a law might be enacted that would enable us to put all railways out of the elevator business."

"We are not in it from choice," replied Mr. Crosby, "and we would welcome a chance to get out."

"This hearing has revealed a hopeless muddle of conditions existing in the grain traffic," said the commissioner.

"A decision of the interstate commerce commission last fall is responsible for the present conditions," said Crosby.

The reply further irritated Commissioner Clark.

Tribute on Every Bushel.

"Explain to me or any one who is neither a shipper nor a carrier, how the railways and the Kansas City board of trade can levy a tribute upon every bushel of grain that enters the city."

Commissioner Clark referred to the rule of the board of trade that all grain received here shall be weighed at an elevator.

"The railways are not responsible for that condition," said Crosby.

"No, but you help and are a party to the scheme."

"It is forced upon us," said Crosby.

Crosby was on the stand nearly all morning. The counsel for the Atchison grain men, who are protesting against railway discrimination in the matter of elevator charges, found it difficult to pin the witness down to a direct answer. Crosby said competitive conditions existing here were not met with in Atchison.

"Other railways, that do not enter Atchison or compete for business there, have forced us to meet conditions here. They furnish free elevator service in Kansas City, and if the Burlington expects to get its share of the business it must meet the competition," said Crosby.

It developed upon cross examination that the railways here undertake to pay all charges the elevator companies designate under the traffic rule, "transfer of grain from car to car, and to ascertain weight." It was shown that this rule is elastic. It may enable the railways to give facilities here which might be denied at other points. Inasmuch as the railways really own or control the elevator companies that handle the grain, these charges, Mr. Crosby said, really amount to nothing.

Light on a Harriman Deal.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 7.—Franklin K. Lane, interstate commerce commissioner, here today resumed the investigation into the Harriman merger. Many prominent railroad men were present, most of them as witnesses.

J. Ross Clark, brother of Senator W. A. Clark and a director and second vice president of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake road, testified that Senator W. A. Clark, R. C. Kerens of St. Louis, Thomas Kerens of Salt Lake City, and their associates originally planned to construct an independent line between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, but in attempting to locate their line through the Meadow Valley, a long cañon in Nevada, they were effectively opposed by the Oregon Short Line.

The Utah, Nevada, and California railroad company, a subsidiary company of the Oregon Short Line, instituted suit to maintain control of the cañon. The cañon was about 100 miles long and so narrow that the surveys of the two roads crossed each other twenty-six times in passing it.

Forced to Harriman's Terms.

The cañon was the key to the situation. He admitted that the reason he entered into a traffic agreement with the Harriman interests to maintain rates into southern California territory was because he could not get through the Meadow valley without it.

The agreement entered into was the ninety-nine year contract made by Mr. Harriman and Senator Clark in New York City. Harriman secured a one-half interest in the Clark road, and the directorate was equally divided between the two interests.

It was also shown that the Clark road and the Oregon Short Line had mutually contracted not to invade each other's territory north and south of Salt Lake respectively.

"By this your people and the Oregon Short Line virtually erected a fence at Salt Lake, you not to get on their side or they on your side?" asked Mr. Severance.

"That may have been the effect."
